Lewis Ready To Defend Illinois Pact Before WLB

Hearing August 3

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, yesterday announced a readiness to appear before the War Labor Board and defend the contract he signed this week with Illinois coal operators.

Marking the mine leader's first public retreat in his long contest with WLB—an agency that he has denounced repeatedly but refused to obey—the action was interpreted as an effort to head off issuance of a subpena by WLB compelling his presence.

The War Labor Board secured the power of subpena and statutory authority under the recently enacted Connally-Smith Antistrike Act. A. U. M. W. spokesman explained that Lewis was ready to appear before the WLB now because it had legal standing, instead of functioning under an executive order as in the past.

Hearing Set for August 3

WLB promptly scheduled a hearing for August 3 at 10 a. m. and invited Lewis and representatives of the Illinois operators to appear.

The Illinois agreement which has been adopted by the U. M. W. policy committee as a basic wage agreement calls for an 8-hour day, 48-hour week, with the eighth hour of each day to be paid at time and a half rates and portal to portal time to be paid for at $1.25 a day. With concessions already ordered by WLB and assuming $1.50 compensation for the eighth hour (miners now work seven hours a day), the contract gives the miners an increase of $3 a day in take-home wages.

Lewis, in a letter addressed to the "Hon. William H. Davis, chairman National War Labor Board," stated, "we believe the agreement is in the public interest and stand ready to appear before you in its support in such hearings as you may elect."

Davis told reporters that he thought "it is highly proper for Mr. Lewis to appear and express his opinion on the soundness of the contract."

"You can attribute that to Mr. Lewis' desire to settle the whole controversy," Davis added in response to a request for comment.

It was known that WLB planned to subpena Lewis before it to explain the contract had he refused to come voluntarily.

The Lewis letter also affirmed that the United Mine Workers was joining with the coal operators in requesting approval of the contract. When submitted Wednesday to WLB, the application for approval was signed only by the operators.

Lewis has denounced the WLB as a "packed court against labor," and has said that "only a yellow dog" would allow Chairman Davis to adjust his wages.

Technically in Defiance

It was not indicated that the action would be followed by complete compliance by the U. M. W. to WLB orders. Lewis is technically in defiance of WLB because of his refusal to obey the board's order to execute a contract with the Appalachian coal producers which made no provision for "portal to portal" pay.

By deciding to come before the board, Lewis has in effect decided

While cost-of-living prices for the country as a whole dropped .2 per cent during the month ended June 15—reflecting the first decline since 1940—they continued upward in Washington, gaining .1 per cent during the period.

Food prices led the national index downward, while the cost of clothing, house furnishings and food pushed it still higher for workers in the National Capital.

The decline in general food prices during the month was .8 per cent, according to Department of Labor statistics revealed yesterday, but the food price increase in the District of Columbia was .1 per cent, the clothing price increase,

President Working On Better Price Control Plan

Congress may be faced with the alternative of approving the Administration's subsidy-rollback program or having the President lift the "Little Steel" wage yardstick as part of a new cost of living control plan which the President said he was working on yesterday.

President Roosevelt did not reveal details of his program, but administration officials asserted that he was hinting at such a plan when he told the press conference that he thought labor was in a predicament in the face of rising prices and controlled wages.

Meanwhile, the War Labor Board announced that it did not plan to retreat from its anti-inflation line even though "other divisions of the anti-inflation army may weaken."

Up to Higher Authority

The WLB statement, contained in an opinion by Wayne L. Morse, public member, explaining the board's refusal to increase the wages of Los Angeles Railway employes, was interpreted as official notice by the board that (1) something should be done about prices, and (2) board members expect a higher authority than WLB to take the responsibility for lifting the wage ceiling.

Morse was believed addressing himself to growing Administration sentiment—outside the War Labor Board—for lifting the "Little Steel" formula as a way-out of the present anti-inflation dilemma.

However, since labor would be unwilling to accept a higher wage ceiling without better control of prices, it is believed that the Administration will stick to it roll-

Canners Warned Against Powders

Home canners were warned yesterday by the Department of Agriculture against the use of "canning powders" and other chemical preservatives, and cautioned against the oven type of canning.

Some of the powders constitute a definite health hazard, it was declared, while oven canning is slow and unsatisfactory for anyone and is a dangerous technique for amateurs.

Tuberculosis Report Sent To D'Alesandro

Bureau Director's Recommendations Finally Pried Loose

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Recommendations for tuberculosis control here, pocketed for months because of policy disagreement in the District Health Department, were forwarded yesterday to Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland, chairman of the Public Health Subcommittee of the House District Committee, The Post learned last night.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, stated that he had submitted a two-page memorandum prepared by Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the Bureau of Tuberculosis, after several requests even though he disagreed with some of the recommendations.

Coulter's program was first sought by the D'Alesandro committee last spring during six weeks' investigation into insanitary housing, tuberculosis and venereal disease here.

Report Was Sensational

Attempts were made to secure the memorandum in time for a committee report, made public June 27, which caused a sensation by its indictment of housing and health conditions in the District. Coulter informed the committee that he had submitted the report to Ruhland.

Recently attempts were renewed to pry the memorandum loose so that the committee might consider

More District Restaurants Rationing Beer

ABC Board Probes Fake 'Luxury Tax' On Bottled Variety

Washington beer situation was becoming increasingly difficult yesterday when additional restaurants joined the ranks of those who have placed the "poor man's champagne" on a rationing basis and began doling out the thirst quencher on the basis of one glass to a customer.

A survey of wholesalers brought forth the information that there were several reasons for the drought, chief of which was the transportation question which has cut deeply into shipments of beer from out-of-the-District breweries.

It was also brought out that the breweries, in most instances, have used their July allotment of malt and are unable to manfacture beer until their August quotas are available.

Meanwhile the ABC Board was investigating complaints that a purported "luxury tax," amounting to from 8 to 10 cents, was being charged on each dozen bottles purchased.

A check with District Tax Collector Guy Pearson and ABC Chairman Thomas E. Lodge ascertained there is no such tax in existence. He added that complaints had been verified and the matter had been brought to the attention of Stewart Berkshire, deputy collector of internal revenue.

Juvenile Gangs Turn Girls Into Ways of Prostitution

(One of a Series)

By Bert Kemmerer
Post Staff Writer

White teen-age delinquents pair off, Negro girls gang up.

That was the conclusion yesterday of Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken of the Police Woman's Bureau, whose long experience in dealing with feminine law violators makes her an unquestioned authority.

Teen-age girl gangsters in Washington carry knives — and razors, if and when available . . . They're definitely not the "gun molls," of the cheap movies and magazines, but the lack of imagination and ratio of venereal disease among them runs about the same.

They are true counterparts of the Werewolves and the Forty Thieves. And oftentimes the companions as well . . . And extremely young.

The white girl delinquents may be found at night around Franklin Park at Thirteenth and K Streets Northwest, Pension Park at Fifth and G Streets Northwest, and another girl gang, the oldest of which is 13, has been reported to Captain Milliken to be operating in Fairlawn Park, Southeast.

These girls are truly criminal, well on the road to professional standing. Their functions are prostitution and robbery. And they have their procurers and boy friends.

They learn their profession quickly and expertly at their hanging-out place.

"In Pension Park," Captain Milliken said, "these girls—some barely in their teens—hover at night waiting and watching for a soldier or sailor or just anyone to come alone. . . . It is the same elsewhere. Rolling drunks is one of their elementary accomplishments.

"White girls, though, may work in pairs but not as gangs. But Negro girls are different—they almost invariably belong to a gang.

A peculiar light on the Negro girl gangs is that they are operated for protection rather than for the commission of crime.

One may slap another, who does

Peace Riots Sweeping Italy; Palermo's Fall Traps 45,000; Reds Advance on Long Front

Soviets Cross River East of Orel, Slaughter 2000 Germans

By Lynn Heinzerling
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Saturday), July 24.—Russian forces crashed across a river directly east of Orel, killing 2000 Germans massed on the west bank, and scored fresh gains of 2 to 4 miles on the north and south sides of the German central front pivot, Moscow announced early today.

German broadcasts said 18 Soviet divisions had begun a powerful offensive south of Leningrad, but official Russian dispatches were silent on developments there. The Germans also told of heavy Red attacks from Orel south to Azov Sea.

The river crossing at Orel appeared to have put the Red army within 8 miles of the city after a 3-mile drive from Zolotarevo, the last village to fall in that area. Another Russian column was less than 9 miles northeast of Orel.

Several more villages fell to the advancing Russians, who knocked out scores of German tanks and killed thousands of enemy troops yesterday in fighting raging clear down to the Sea of Azov, said the midnight bulletin recorded by the Soviet monitor.

Nazi Regiment Wiped Out

North of Orel the Russians beat down several fierce German counterattacks near Bolkhov, wiping out a regiment of enemy infantry. Bolkhov, keystone of a strong Nazi defense network 35 miles above Orel, fell to the Russians Thursday.

The Soviet drive on the north also was wheeling behind Orel, endangering the railway running northwest to Bryansk. One dispatch said Karachev, midway between the two cities on the railway, already was threatened.

A special communique said 92 German tanks were knocked out and 112 planes shot down during Thursday, and the midnight bulletin said 5400 enemy troops were killed and 85 tanks destroyed yes-

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 23.—An American armored column striking with deadly speed to the north coast has captured Palermo, capital of Sicily, to trap 45,000 or more Axis troops and apparently end Axis resistance in fourth-fifths of the island.

Reuters quoted a Stockholm dispatch saying the Axis forces had begun evacuating Sicily. The source of the report was a dispatch to the Svenska Dagbladet from Bern, Switzerland.

The United States Seventh Army tanks and cars which thundered into the sixth largest Italian city from three sides already had begun fanning out to mop up thousands of Axis troops.

The sledgehammer blow caused consternation among the surprised defenders and spread demoralization throughout the Axis camp.

(A Rome radio broadcast recorded by N. B. C. implied another Axis reverse on the eastern coast at Catania. "Our forces have readjusted their positions around Catania to the rear," said the broadcast referring to the area where crack German troops have put up a stubborn defense against the British Eighth Army.)

Hit From Three Sides

An official announcement tonight said the Americans had applied their modern tank and plane tactics to capture the big city which is the political and cultural center of Sicily.

One armored column hooked into the Sicilian capital from the southwest, another hit it from the south and southeast, and a third cut

Efforts to Spare City

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt said yesterday that Rome was bombed to save the lives of American and other Allied invaders of Sicily, who were endangered by enemy troops and weapons coming from the north.

The Chief Executive said the Allies had been trying for a year to have Rome declared an open city—that is a city free of troops, war factories and the like—so that it could be spared. But the Fascists, he said, would not agree.

Even now, the President said, we still hope that the Germans and Fascists will make it an open city.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that there was no thought of retaliation behind the raid. It was simply a case, he said, where destruction was necessary to save the lives of Allied soldiers.

Silent on Pope's Words

The President expressed his views at a press-radio conference, his first since American planes raided the Italian capital and smashed its big railroad yards, airdromes and war factories.

He was first asked if he had any comment to make on the statement of Pope Pius XII in which

Thunder in the Pacific

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Saturday) July 24.—Allied bombers smashed a Japanese attempt to run supplies to their strong base at Buin on Bougainville Island Thursday night, sinking a 9000-ton enemy seaplane tender and damaging one of four escorting destroyers.

The seaplane tender of the Nisshin class, was sighted off the coast of Bougainville Island just at dusk. Heavy torpedo divebombers, protected by a strong force of fighters, sped to the attack. Japanese Zeros, in force, attempted to ward off the attack but they were driven away by our fighters. Five of the enemy planes were shot down. Three of ours are missing.

No Report on Munda

Two-engined bombers and fighters in sweeps along the coasts of New Guinea and New Britain destroyed 12 enemy barges between Hanisch Harbor, just east of Lae, and Cape Bushing, near the western tip of New Britain. At least 13 other barges were destroyed or seriously damaged.

Today's communique contained no information on the progress of American troops closing in on the Japanese air base at Munda, New Georgia. It said merely that "divebombers attacked enemy gun posi-

Strikes Reported In Major Cities; Balkan Unrest Flaming Anew

The thunderous American capture of Palermo, sealing off in western Sicily upward of 45,000 Italian troops, brought immediate demonstrations and cries of "peace" in virtually all of Italy's main cities, dispatches from Madrid to Allied headquarters in North Africa said yesterday.

The swift fall of the Sicilian capital of 389,699 population, only 280 miles from Rome, also brought repercussions in the Balkans, where revolt was reporting spreading.

An Associated Press dispatch passed by Allied censors in North Africa, declared that accounts from Madrid said Italians demonstrated in the streets of Rome, Venice, Milan, Turin, Florence and Trieste, shouting: "Peace!"

A wave of strikers and sabotage was declared in Madrid to be sweeping Italy, and the Berlin radio said a Rome dispatch disclosed another shake-up in the Italian government.

Credence Given Reports

According to the Germans, Minister of Transport Senator Vittorio Cini "had been released from his office by Il Duce for reasons of health." This broadcast asserted that Giusseppe Peverelli, undersecretary, had been appointed minister of transport.

Especial credence was lent to the Italian disorder reports because they came from Madrid, which in the past has given the Axis the break in news and which only in a few instances has played United Nations communiques above those from Berlin and Rome.

The Balkan reports came from both Madrid and Berlin, and emphasized the heavy fighting by saying that 10,000 guerillas were killed in Yugoslavia.

Ankara reported heightening unrest in Greece. Reuters news agency said many Greek officials and police were reported to have abandoned their posts, and that the Germans immediately listed these men as saboteurs subject to execution.

On Crete, the Germans executed 50 for aiding the July 4 British commando raid on the Heraklion airdrome, and the German governor warned that "severer measures" would follow, the Hellenic news service said in Cairo.

The Berlin radio also broadcast that the deputy governor of Polvdiv Province in Bulgaria, Nikola Christoff, was assassinated Thursday by alleged Communists.

Of the Yugoslav fighting, Berlin admitted a violent battle had been fought in Montenegro, and said a reward of 100,000 marks had been placed upon the head of guerilla leader, Josip Broz, widely known as "Tito."

Everybody Wants This Baby—

JIMMY DOE

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Although little Jimmy Doe's real parents still have not been located, a long list of Washingtonians besieged Gallinger Hospital and the Board of Public Welfare yesterday with requests to adopt the 10-day-old baby found abandoned on a doorstep late Wednesday night.

Oblivious to the cares that would beset an adult mind about an infant deserted in a war-busy Capital, Jimmy continued to display a sunny disposition while the wheels of fortune went spinning furiously regarding his future.

Most eager to make him a member of their family were an Army colonel and his wife, who saw Jimmy's picture in The Post yesterday and immediately fell in love with him.

"He looks very much like our young nephew," the colonel explained, "and since we have no children, we are very anxious to adopt this particular baby. I understand it would take about four or five months, though."

He and his wife have received permission from Dr. Edgar C. Bocock, Gallinger superintendent, to visit Jimmy at the hospital in the next few days.

The little boy was discovered in the vestibule of an apartment house at 950 Twenty-fifth Street Northwest, wrapped in a blue blanket and dressed in a clean, neatly embroidered dress. At his side was a half-filled bottle of milk.

No steps can be taken concerning his adoption until police determine that his identity cannot be established. The women's bureau currently is investigating the case.

Sicily's Biggest City Quits

Capture of Palermo Climaxes Lightning Dash by Americans

By Michael Chinigo
International News Service Staff Writer

With American Forces at Palermo, July 23.—The Stars and Stripes waved over Sicily's biggest city 280 miles from Rome today after two crack mobile units of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton's Seventh Army stormed into Palermo virtually unopposed.

Not a single "defender" of the island's key port city opposed the occupation of the Italian citadel after the Yanks crushed a German machine-gun nest in the outskirts.

Two American columns met dramatically in the center of the city yesterday evening to share the honor of officially adding Palermo to the list of Sicilian centers liberated from the Axis yoke by the United Nations.

The junction was effected at 6:45 p. m. but the honor of making the first entry into the prized bastion at 2:45 p. m. went to a regiment under the command of Lieut. Col. Harry Sherman—the same outfit which captured the southern stronghold of Agrigento.

Occupation of Palermo climaxed a history-making 90-mile dash from Gela in 12 days, the Yanks covering the last 56 miles from the Enna strongpoint in 58 hours.

Touring the city, which had a peacetime population of 389,699 residents, I found that practically every building had gaping wounds from our air bombardment. The accuracy and force of our air attacks was shown by the widespread

Blasting of Crete Strengthens Signs Of Invasion Soon

London, July 23 (INS).—Persistent reports of an impending Allied invasion of Crete in the eastern Mediterranean were given new weight tonight by German radio reports that strong forces of American and British bombers attacked Axis bases and three large towns on the island.

Axis expectation of new Allied invasion in the eastern Mediterranean was seen in a London Evening Standard dispatch today quoting the Vichy radio as saying an Allied campaign in that area is "imminent."

The German account of the raid on Crete claimed 10 of the attacking planes had been shot down.

U. S. Warships Shell Kiska Japs 7th Time

Return Fire Weak; Nips Bomb U. S. Base at Funafuti

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Heavy warships of the United States North Pacific Fleet turned their powerful batteries on the Japanese base at Kiska Thursday afternoon in an intensification of the preinvasion bombardment of the enemy-held Aleutian island.

The Navy announced the seventh shelling of Kiska this month in a communique which reported that Jap coastal guns returned the fire but did no damage to the American task force.

Yesterday's Nevy report also disclosed that Nipponese planes raided our advance base at Funafuti, in the Ellice Islands, Wednesday morning, for the second time in two days.

Two of the Jap bombers were shot down, but "some personnel casualties" were suffered by the American garrison, it was stated. There has been no report of damage sustained to our installations on the South Pacific island.

Speculation as to Motive

The two attacks on Funafuti aroused speculation here as to the motive of the Japs. It was felt that the enemy might be trying to interfere with our supply lines to the South Pacific and Southwest Pacific fighting fronts, or possibly might fear a new Allied offensive in this area.

Funafuti is an outpost guarding the sea lanes from Hawaii to the Solomons and Australia, and if it could be knocked out or captured, the pressure on the Japs on New Georgia and New Guinea might be lessened. On the other hand, the enemy might be expecting another American thrust from our air base in the Ellice Islands, perhaps against their outposts in the Gilbert Island group.

Pounded by Liberators

The report on action in the Aleutians also revealed that Army Liberator heavy bombers pounded Kiska the day before the warship bombardment. Many hits were scored on the airfield runaway and main camp area and several fires were started.

Runway Finally Completed

An Associated Press dispatch from Alaska Defense Command Headquarters declared that aerial reconnaissance of Kiska shows that the Japs have finally completed their 3700-foot runway, and it was believed here that a showdown for possession of the island may not be far off.

Thursday's heavy bombardment was evidently an effort to put the new field out of action for a time and soften up the enemy base for a possible invasion. The attack was much more powerful than prior assaults. The latter have been carried out by "light surface units," either light cruisers or destroyers, and most of them have been made by one ship at a time.

The latest bombardment was by "heavy and light surface units," indicated that either battleships or heavy cruisers or perhaps both participated.

Blockade Expective

Completion of the Kiska airfield does not mean that our North Pacific forces will meet land-based enemy planes the next time they attack the island. The Japs will have some trouble getting planes there.

Bombers can be flown in from Paramushiru, more than 800 nautical miles west, but fighters would have to be brought at least part of the way to Kiska by ship. Due to the American blockade, the enemy has been able to get few, if any, cargo ships to the island.

London, July 23.—Dr. Hubert Ripka, minister of state in the Czech government in exile, said today that 50,000 Czech citizens have been executed by the Nazis since the occupation of Czecho-Slovakia began in March, 1939.

"During the same period about 200,000 Czechs were sent to German concentration camps and more than 500,000 to forced labor in Germany and other Nazi-occupied countries," Dr. Ripka added. He said his figures did not include thousands of Czech Jews killed, imprisoned or deported.

it in preparing legislation this summer to be submitted to Congress in the fall.

Ruhland said he wanted to make it clear that the memorandum did not embody the recommendations of the District Health Department, but represented "only the personal suggestions of Dr. Coulter."

Detailing the recommendations, the health officer mentioned especially a suggestion that the District have a 40-bed detention hospital for tubercular patients who refused treatment when their condition was such that they might spread disease.

Emphasis on Education

Ruhland said he did not approve of this recommendation because he did not feel that the Health Department should be charged with custodial service. He said he felt it would undermine the public confidence in the work of the department if people felt they would be put in detention for having tuberculosis. Emphasis, Ruhland asserted, must be placed on education in the public health field.

The health officer also took exception to a recommendation that the D'Alesandro Committee check up in six months to see if their recommendations have been followed. He characterized this as "a random thought" which he did not believe Dr. Coulter intended to have taken seriously.

Impractical Step

Another recommendation in the memorandum suggested that one Health Department official should control the policies of all tuberculosis work here, including the policies of Glenn Dale Sanitoria, Upshur, and Gallinger's tuberculosis hospital. This would have the effect of putting policies of these institutions under Coulter's supervision, Ruhland said, adding that this step was "definitely not practical."

Other recommendations included chest X-rays of inmates of the District jail, of homes for the indigent, Federal and District employes, including school teachers, and chest X-rays of all persons admitted to municipal hospitals "whenever feasible."

Coulter, who is ill at his home, could not be reached for comment. He recently wrote the D'Alesandro Committee that his recommendations were in Ruhland's hands.

Interurban Strike Looms On West Coast

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, July 23.—Company officials, after appealing to Washington for intervention, voiced little hope today that a strike can be averted on the Pacific Electric Interurban Line, which provides rail and bus service for a vast southern California war industrial and agricultural region.

"The thing is out of our hands," said O. A. Smith, Pacific Electric president. "We have tried to give the men the raise they seek. We can go no further."

The strike, which would involve some 2000 trainmen and bus operators, members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, has been set for 2 a. m. Sunday. It would affect directly about 400,000 persons who use the company's lines daily. Many thousands of them are workers in aircraft factories, shipyards and other essential industries.

Pacific Electric employes, receiving an 87 cents per hour maximum, demanded a 13-cent increase, which was granted by the company. The new rate went for approval to Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson, who reduced the boost to 3 cents an hour.

Railway Act Applies

[Because the Pacific electric controversy involves the Railroad Brotherhoods, the Railway Labor Act, rather than the Connally-Smith Antistrike Act, applies to the case. The strike vote was taken in an effort to comply with strike provisions of the Railway Labor Act. The Los Angeles Railway case, however, is subject to provisions of the antistrike law calling for a 30-day cooling-off period before a strike.]

A surprise attack on enemy installations at Rekata Bay on Santa Isabel Island, northeast of New Georgia, was carried out by our fighters and bombers.

In Vella Gulf, between Kolombangara and Vella Lavella Islands, Allied light surface units intercepted four Japanese barges, attempting to run supplies to Kolombangara. Two of the barges were set afire.

Village Bombed

A strong force of four-engined bombers, escorted by fighters, dropped 61 tons of bombs on Bogadjim, a village 20 miles south of the big Japanese base at Madang, New Guinea.

Approximately 60 Japanese fighters rose to offer battle to the Allied raiders.

They were "decisively defeated and dispersed," the communique said. At least 13, and probably 18, of the enemy fighters were destroyed and five others were shot out of combat. Two of our fighters were lost.

U. S. Fliers Use Gasoline and Guns To Sink Jap Ship

Los Angeles, July 23 (AP).—Resourceful American Lockheed Lightning pilots, lacking bombs, destroyed a Japanese freighter by drenching the vessels decks with high-test gasoline and then igniting it with shells and bullets from their nose guns.

The story was told today by Maj. John W. Mitchell, Enid, Miss., and Capt. Thomas G. Lanphier, jr., born in Panama, Canal Zone. Both now home from the South Pacific.

Doris Duke Bound For Reno Divorce, N. Y. Paper Says

New York, July 23 (INS).—The eight-year-old marriage of Doris Duke and James H. R. Cromwell "seems Reno-bound at last," the New York Daily Mirror reported tonight in a copyrighted story.

According to the Mirror, the tobacco heiress, known as "the world's richest girl," apparently departed by train Wednesday night for the West and, the newspaper said, her ticket was for Reno.

"But," the newspaper went on, "'an authoritative source' tried to throw cold water on the whole business by saying he thought Doris was only going away for a vacation, and that if she was planning a divorce it would be a big surprise to him.

Nazi Paratroops Attack Allies' Rear

With the British Eighth Army South of Catania, July 21 (Delayed) (INS).—Considerable numbers of German paratroopers dropped behind Allied lines on the Catania plain today to attack communications, bridges, stores and supply dumps.

It was the first time the Nazis had landed behind us, other paratroopers being dropped as infantrymen to delay our advance. The new detachment of parachutists was assigned to do the demolition work the reatreating Italians failed to do.

back program.

President Roosevelt told reporters that his program when completed would be submitted to Congress—because it will cost money. It was possible that the President would outline to Congress a plan to lift wage ceilings as an alternative to acceptance of the price curb program.

Administration officials believe that Congress will decline to take responsibility for the possible inflationary consequences of raising the wage ceiling—although they believe that practical politics will leave no alternative if Congress sticks to its recent reluctance to approve inflation-control through subsidies.

Representatives of organized labor demanded on Thursday that President Roosevelt take steps to roll back prices to September 15 levels in accordance with the October 2 Stabilization Act or discharge OPA Chief Prentiss M. Brown and lift the "Little Steel" formula.

While pointing to the danger of continued demands from labor for "inflationary" wage increases, Morse gave a firm indorsement to the Administration's subsidy rollback program by stating:

"It (WLB) feels that it is only fair to demand that prices and profits also should be checked and brought within reasonable limits under the program for stabilization of the national economy."

"The present-day problems of our domestic economy are becoming so serious and critical that the board must 'hold the lid' on wages, and, at least for the time being, must insist that labor make wage sacrifices.

"The life of an American soldier is a sacred thing. There is something almost sacrilegious about insisting upon improving the economic conditions of our civilians at home above a standard of living of health and decency, while at the same time, so many of our young men are suffering and dying in our armed forces on foreign soil in order that our American way of life may be preserved."

Morse, affirming that WLB was prepared to stick by its "tough" Los Angeles decision, even in the face of political pressure to grant a rehearing, said:

"The wages received by the employes in this case are not substandard. The time has come for American labor to realize that if we are going to stop inflation, we cannot continue to raise wages in the wage brackets which are not substandard. . . . In this, as in other cases, the easy way out would have been to grant substantial wage increases. However, if the board had followed that course of action, it would have been derelict in its duty and false to the obligations which it owes to the Commander in Chief and to the country."

President Roosevelt said that he was working on a new plan designed to accomplish the obligation of the October 2 Act to hold prices and wages at September 15 levels. He said he did not like to call his program a rollback plan and suggested that reporters think of another word.

Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Farm Appropriations Subcommittee, meanwhile, told reporters that price-fixing "is on a day-to-day basis."

Russell who called yesterday at the White House, said he hoped there would not be an upward adjustment in wages and prices "but I don't see how we are going to avoid it."

Rome Raid Saved Lives, Roosevelt Says

the Holy Father deplored the raid. The President said he had not. He likewise passed over a question about the effect of the Roosevelt-Churchill appeal to the Italian people.

"Mr. President," he was asked, "what are we doing to have Rome declared an open city?"

The President said we had been very anxious to have the city declared open, and had been making efforts along that line during the last year. But, he said, the Fascists wouldn't agree. On the contrary, they made Rome an important military center.

Has Munitions Plants

Rome (he continued) now has munitions plants, and airports outside and inside the city. It is an important railroad center for the transportation of troops, guns and ammunition to the south.

We used every argument to have Rome declared an open city, Mr. Roosevelt said; we pleaded; we did our best, but it didn't work. And now we still hope that the Germans and the Fascists will declare it open.

Of course, the President said, when it came to the invasion of Sicily, we had to think about American boys. It seemed perfectly clear that American and British troops in Sicily were in greater danger because of the influx of guns and planes from the north.

Rome, Mr. Roosevelt went on to say, was the center of this supply line, with its big railroad yards and air fields.

The primary objective of the bombing, he emphasized, was to save American lives. The more supplies could be diverted from the south, the better it would be for the American troops. It was necessary for us to interrupt the traffic, and in this sense the bombing was very successful.

The Germans, with the aid of the Italians, have destroyed some 4000 churches, hospitals and libraries, Mr. Roosevelt said, and they had no compunction in doing it.

But he didn't feel that this was an essential argument. This was not a question of retaliation, he said, and ought not to be put on that basis. But sometimes destruction for the saving of men's lives in war becomes an inevitable necessity.

Allies' Stand Known

"Are efforts to make Rome an open city being continued?" the President was asked.

He said that they were in this sense, that everybody knows what our position is. That, he said, had been made clear for more than a year.

The President was asked if the raid on Rome was an implementation of the Roosevelt-Churchill warning to the Italian people to get out of the war. He said it was not, and that the two things ought not be confused.

In the first instance, he said, it was a message to the entire Italian people; in the second, it was the problem of a city venerated all over the world, but used for military purposes.

Cost of Living Climbs in D. C. As National Index Declines

.6 per cent, and the increase in prices of house furnishings, .2 per cent.

The whole cost-of-living index on June 15 was 23.8 per cent above January of 1941, base date for the "little steel" formula; 7.6 per cent above May of 1942, when OPA initiated price control, and 6 per cent above September 15, 1942, which is the stabilization date set in the last Price Control Act.

Food costs, which have been pushing the whole index up for two years and gradually taken 40 cents out of every cost-of-living dollar, in June were 45 per cent higher than in January, 1941, 16 per cent higher than in May, 1942, and 12.1 per cent higher than on September 15.

The downward drop was led by potatoes, which decreased 9 per cent in price, and by butter, which dropped 5 cents a pound to national average of 50½ cents a pound. The potato decrease was due largely to the abundant new crop which reached the markets after a severe shortage, while the butter decrease was caused by the OPA rollback of 10 per cent which went into effect in early June.

Greater Decline Expected

A greater decrease in the index is anticipated for the month ended July 15, as this will reflect the OPA's rollback of meat prices and a big seasonal decrease in the prices of fresh vegetables.

Butter and potatoes account for about 9 per cent of the cost of food purchased by the average urban worker's family, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said, and now have a weight of about 4 per cent in the total cost-of-living index.

The bureau pointed out that victory gardens will affect the index only to the extent they lower commercial prices. No account can be taken in the index, it was said, of the drop in food costs during the summer for millions of families who grow their own vegetables.

"The index cannot reflect the added effort and inconvenience of wartime living, but is designed to measure changes in retail prices of goods and services currently purchased by families of city wage earners and clerical workers," it declared.

Prices of canned fruits and vegetables declined 6 per cent during the month as OPA established community dollar and cents ceilings in many large cities. Eggs, apples and oranges showed the chief food increase "because of seasonal reductions in supply." Prices of meats were generally unchanged, with slight increases for beef, lamb and fish balanced by slight decreases for pork and chickens.

Clothing Mostly Stable

Clothing prices throughout the country remained stable, although declines were reported for rayon hose and increases for cotton underwear and pajamas "because of the disappearance of lower-priced lines."

Miscellaneous goods and services, such as medical care, movies, and beauty and barber shop services, continued to increase. The cost of automobile collision insurance was reduced "because of the increasing age of cars on the road."

While Washington workers were unfortunate compared to the national average, they were luckier than the residents of Cincinnati, Cleveland, Savannah, San Francisco, and Los Angeles where the increases were .4, .9, .3, .5 and .4 per cent, respectively.

to rest his case on the merits of the Illinois agreement—not permitting the side issue of recognition of WLB to interefere.

The August 3 hearing is expected to be one of unusual drama and importance in the "battle of coal." Lewis will have a chance to explain and justify his agreement at an open hearing—the board will have a chance to fire questions at the mine leader to determine whether it conforms to the stabilization program.

Other coal operators—eager to secure their mines back from the Government—are expected to watch the proceedings as an indication of whether they should make their peace with Lewis or continue in their refusal to grant concessions beyond those ordered by WLB.

the local office of OPA, said yesterday that if similar complaints reached his office he would take steps on the basis that price ceilings had been violated.

Already in general practice among retailers is the request that bottles be returned before any beer is sold. The rule has caused dealers considerable headache as a similar ruling caused druggists who had to demand an empty toothpaste tube before selling a full one. It was reported, however, that confirmed beer drinkers were somehow able to scratch up their required number of bottles in most cases.

An additional development on the beer front was the undertaking of the War Food Administration to consider an order to request brewers to set aside an allotted amount of "weak beer" for the armed services. This would induct most of the country's supply of 3.2 per cent beer into the armed forces, it was announced.

Kid Gangs Foster Prostitution

not directly retaliate. She waits and sooner or later the chance comes—when the offended one has her gang and waylays the offender. The result is another of the numerous cutting affairs in Precinct 2.

Although Negro girl gangs are primarily organized for personal security, one of the most common practices of members is the schooling of new members.

Whether it be prostitution, thievery or shoplifting, the newcomer is taught the technique of the trade by her more experienced sisters. This is done by assignment. To become a "successful" shoplifter, the novice first must be able to pilfer toothbrushes, cheap jewelry and the like from 5 and 10 cent stores before tackling such items as lingerie and tailored gowns.

"This group action on the part of the Negroes is traditional," Captain Milliken said. "Their cruelty is more pronounced with their gang, their retaliation more vicious and swift."

"These girl mobsters too, have their romance—after their own fashion," she explained.

"Their courtship is entirely caveman style. Each of these girls feels that she must have a man.

"The streets in the slum district are common with weird and gaudily dressed males of military and draft age who are not in the service, and from the ranks of these come the procurers and the men who are the consorts of gang girls—already turned prostitute.

"These youths are practically always the unfit—4 F's because of venereal diseases, or the result of it. But to the girls it doesn't seem to matter much . . ."

"It's a common sight to see one of these creatures slapping his girl friend's face—even blacking her eye while walking on the street," said J. M. Montgomery, a Negro school teacher and social worker here.

"I have seen as high as six of these brutal acts in one night—and I've heard the screaming and crying of the girls as their boy friends pounded their faces with sickening rhythm.

"Why?

". . . Because she smiled at another brute, or was not at home when he came by; or because she had seen him with another girl and dared to reprove him," he concluded.

In the meanwhile there's Georgetown. Although there have been kid gangs in this section of the District of Columbia there is no organized band at this time.

"Ninety per cent of juvenile crime in Georgetown can be solved here," Arch Winfree, captain of police in Precinct 7, said.

"During the past year we had 127 juvenile cases, 98 of them white and 29 Negro," he continued. "There are 77,000 children in this precinct. Police here know those who are offenders and we usually know where to find them."

Captain Winfree was emphatic about the Georgetown branch of the Boys Club of Washington, headed by P. E. Casassa.

"We just have no trouble at all from that source," he said. (More than 200 former members of the Boys Club are now in the armed forces.)

"Most of the juvenile cases stem from the C. & O. Canal Road district," he asserted, "and our men know everyone there.

"There are promiscuous girls, of course—but no girl gangs."

To many, there appears no end to this sordid cycle brought about by broken homes, lack of family care, haphazard existence, the slums, the war, disease—all contributing to this vicious situation in the Nation's Capital.

Jersey Attorney Slain; Assailant Takes Own Life

Paterson, N. J., July 23 (AP).—Joseph T. Lieblich, prominent Paterson attorney, was fatally shot today by a 72-year-old man who then turned the gun on himself and committeed suicide in Lieblich's office, Detective Capt. George Bengert said.

Lieblich, 55, wounded in the stomach, was taken to Paterson General Hospital where he died at 10 o'clock tonight.

Bengert identified the dead man as Ladislaw Adamsky of Clifton.

Lieblich, 55, wounded in the stomach, is in a hospital in a critical condition.

The detective said Adamsky had been inquiring about legal representation on a legacy he claimed was due him.

Huge Toll Inflicted On Italian Aviation

He Strikes Back

Jap Carrier Meets Wrath Of D. C. Flier

When Lieut. Comdr Stockton (Bierney) Strong, 3440 Thirty-fourth Place, gets angry, he likes nothing better than to take it out on whatever warring Japs happen to be in his gun-sights.

STRONG

Thus it was the Japanese carrier Zuikaku was smashed in a dive-bombing attack by Strong off Guadalcanal last October.

"I was mad," the flier told reporters in New York yesterday, explaining that two months before the Japs had badly damaged the carrier on which he was serving.

The sun was in his favor and the Japs didn't see him at first. "At 1800 feet I let go two 500-pound bombs," he said. "They both hit."

The Japanese planes on the carrier's deck were smashed and the ship belched flames, "but I didn't have time to sit around," he said at a press conference at the Third Naval District public relations office. "The Zeros were all over us."

The flier is in the United States on leave after 18 months of continuous action in the Pacific.

Strong said he and Ensign B. Irvine, who was piloting another dive bomber, "jumped into a cloud" and returned to their carriers after battling off 12 Jap Zeros. Two enemy planes were downed in the fracas. The same day, Strong said, "The outfit from the Hornet put another carrier, the Shokaku, out of commission.

For the action he was decorated with the Navy Cross, the second time he had received the award. He also holds the air medal.

Commenting on Japanese planes, he said "That Zero is one of the best planes I've ever seen," but added, "I wouldn't want to fly one. They have no armor. You hit them and they burn up."

Japanese pilots were good in the early stages of the war, he said, explaining "they could shoot and I had a healthy respect for them." He said present Jap airmen were inferior.

Lieutenant Commander Strong is the son of Mrs. C. B. Strong who lives at the Thirty-fourth Place address. He attended Western High School and Devitt Preparatory School and entered the Naval Academy by presidential appointment and competitive examination. He was graduated in 1937.

17 of 25 Planes Fighting American Raiders Downed

By Clinton Green
International News Service Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 23.—Staggering losses inflicted on enemy air forces dominated all reports from the Allied Air Command today as raiding planes returned from Thursday's heavy assaults on Foggia, Salerno and Capodichino in Italy.

Twenty-four enemy planes were destroyed with a loss of six Allied planes.

While it was revealed that 175 enemy air craft had been shot down in combat over Sicily in the first week of the invasion campaign, and 4000 tons of bombs had been hurled into Axis strongholds on the island during that week, American P-40 Warhawks returned from a raid on Sardinia reporting a "field day" against enemy fighters.

Enemy planes which rose in defense of the military targets on Sardinia against our P-40s paid a heavy toll of 17 of their fighters out of a total of 25 which engaged the Yank pilots in a series of scattered attacks.

Between duels, the Warhawks found time to shoot up motor and rail transports.

Six of the Americans shot down two enemy planes apiece.

Flying Fortresses went unescorted on the Foggia raid. One large explosion in the center of the marshaling yards indicated an ammunition dump or ammunition train was hit.

Enemy fighters approached the Forts, but failed to close in combat.

Salerno, another of the objectives on the Italian mainland, was attacked by B-26 Marauders escorted by P-38s, hitting a bridge, railroad yards and destroying a single track line leading to the docks, a cement plant and the railroad workshops.

Salerno also was attacked during the night of July 21-22 by R. A. F. Wellingtons flying through bad weather to bomb the railway yards. Capodichino, the big airfield in the suburbs of Naples, was raided the same night, for the third night assault in a row on the Naples area.

[The Italian communique, quoted by the Associated Press, said Allied raiders caused considerable damage at Foggia and Salerno, and some damage at small centers in Lazio and Campagna Romana, near Rome.] path of destruction in the dock areas and the huge piles of rubble in the streets.

I had only a fleeting glimpse, but I noted that our heavy bombing had left virtually untouched the city's cathedral and opera house.

The world-famous beauty of Palermo Bay was accentuated by a brilliant moon in a star-studded sky—but still-smoldering fires testified that the one-time resort was now a battlefront.

When the boys got together at the end of their busy day to compare experiences, it developed that the honor of capturing the city fell to units commanded by Capts. Clayton Thobro of Rock Springs, Wyo., William Hicks of Spartanburg, S. C., and an Indian chief, Pvt. Joseph Jojola of Aimanperda, N. M.

The formal entry of our main body still is awaited. The bulk of those men, who had marched the long weary miles from Licata, waited by the side of the highway, giving way to jeeps and trucks supplying the mobile advance units ahead.

While they waited they hummed softly—"it's not such a long way to Tipperary." And they should know, for they have completed such a march, chewing up two entire Italian divisions en route.

Rome May Become An Open City, Says Madrid Dispatch

London, July 23 (AP).—The Daily Mail said in a dispatch from Madrid today that belief was growing in the Spanish capital that Rome may yet be declared an open city.

"Particular attention is paid to a passage in the Pope's letter . . . in which His Holiness referred to his negotiations on behalf of the Italian capital," the dispatch said.

The Daily Mail correspondent wrote that Adolf Hitler was reported to be urging the Italian government to move and that there was talk in Rome of transferring the government and military staffs to Verona, 250 miles to the north.

Russians Gain All Along Line

terday on three sides of the city.

The Germans also lost heavily in the Belgorod sector and the Donets Basin to the south, and Russian forces again were attacking the Germans in the northwestern Caucasus with Novorossisk their objective.

After standing firm against German attacks in the Belgorod area, the Russians resumed their offensive and captured a number of populated places, killing about 1000 Germans, the communique said.

Fighting in Donets Area

South of Izyum in the Donets Basin fighting still was described by the Russians as "of local importance" despite German accounts which called it part of a general offensive.

Several thousand Germans have been killed in four days of fighting southwest of Voroshilovgrad where active operations were continuing as the Soviet forces captured several "advantageous positions." The Germans were counterattacking again and again in this area.

Around Belgorod, 165 miles south of Orel, the Russians said they advanced from 3½ to 5 miles. It was the fourth successive gain in this area where the Germans made their lone penetration in their abortive offensive against Kursk.

Action In Donets Area

The Donets theater is 300 miles south of Orel, and the latent warfare there apparently has been fanned into a fresh offensive by a shift of German forces to the Orel sector. For several days, the Russians have spoken of "local fighting" in the Donets Basin, and the Russian custom is to announce offensives only after they are really rolling.

The German communique, broadcast by radio Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, admitted broken lines and "fluctuating fighting," but asserted the "armies on the Eastern Front are standing firm and unshaken." It said 566 tanks and 105 Russian planes were destroyed yesterday.

The loss of either Orel or Bryansk would be a major blow to the Germans. Both cities are important railway hubs and both have been ringed with thick defenses.

American Troops Capture Capital

northward to intercept enemy forces withdrawing from Palermo toward the east.

It's estimated that approximately three divisions, 45,000 men, now are cut off in western Sicily.

Up to last midnight the American Seventh Army had captured 27,000 prisoners, 250 guns, 500 vehicles and 10 million rounds fo ammunition, and had destroyed 84 tanks, of which 14 were 60-ton Mark VI Tigers. This was a conservative count.

The battle for Sicily appeared to be falling rapidly into the same pattern as the battle for Tunisia in its closing stages.

The capture of Palermo with its extensive shipping, naval and air facilities gave to the Allies a dominating port on the Tyrrhenian Sea approach to Rome, and reports at Allied headquarters indicated that all Allied armies were converging swiftly toward the one remaining active battle line in northeastern Sicily.

Still Hard Fight for Catania

Axis resistance was now compressed in the northeastern tip, in an area but little larger than Cap Bon, where Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim's army met catastrophe in Tunisia.

Defending Catania, the southern gateway to the escape port of Messina on this tip, the Nazi Herman Goering Division fought with unabated tenacity in a battle which had held Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's veterans to a yard-by-yard progress for eight days.

But the Canadians, on Montgomery's west wing, were reported swinging around the German's flank, meeting fierce resistance but driving the Fifteenth German Armored Division before them.

And the main American force, despite the sweep of its units over most of western Sicily, was reported to be in the area northeast of Enna where it could bear directly upon the Nazi's western flank.

(The situation appeared to be similar to that in Tunisia before the American breakthrough at Mateur. Then Montgomery's powerful drive up the Tunisian east coast caused the Axis commanders to shift a large part of their forces to meet it, expecting the main offensive to come from that direction. Instead the main blow came from the west.

Mount Etna Stronghold

(Again in Sicily, Montgomery's rapid advances in the early stages caused the Axis to rush its best forces to stop him. Mount Etna's 10,000-foot slope has been turned into a formidable stronghold, barring the way from the south except for a narrow, easily defended pathway between it and the sea.)

The capture of Palermo was the feat of an American division which exceeded even the expectations of the American commander, the speed specialist, Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., by romping a distance of more than 60 miles in 58 hours from Enna in central Sicily.

The advance elements penetrated the city at 10 a. m. yesterday, so paralyzing the large defense forces who had believed their enemy at least 15 miles away that there was virtually no resistance when the main body of the invaders arrived. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's communique said the capture was completed by evening.

The Italians were so surprised that they had no time to carry out elaborate preparations to blow up docks and other military instaallations and these fell into Allied hands without damage except for that done by their own bombs.

This can be quickly repaired, it was said, and the Allies will then have a most advantageous springboard for naval and air action over Sardinia and Italy and their sea approaches.

The city's population of more than 300,000 makes it the largest in Sicily.

Italian defenders complained that they had been given no assistance by their navy except for the sending of a fast speedboat to remove a number of high naval officers at the last moment.

However, Allied headquarters announced today the capture of Admiral Priato Leonard, former commandant of Augusta naval base.

There was no word today of the progress of the American columns thrusting along Sicily's southwestern coast and last reported at Castelvetrano. They were believed far beyond that point, however.

(A German radio commentator, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, acknowledged in a Berlin broadcast that the Axis had lost Palermo, and said that Axis forces had been withdrawn as well from Marsala and Trapani, the other two of the three most important cities in western Sicily.)

Capture of Marsala and Trapani on the west coast would leave 80 per cent of the island undefended.

Foe Still Reinforcing

Spreading over a huge area of the island like a flood, American forces had now established an L shaped line running from Palermo to Mezzoiuso, 15 miles to the south, then west through Carleone, Campofiorito, Contessa Entellina, Santa Margherita di Belice, Montevago, Castelvetrano and beyond.

(This line leaves an area of only about 1250 square miles in western Sicily outside the zone of Allied occupation.)

The liquidation of resistance in that sector may be only a matter of days and then, it was assumed, the full weight of the American Army may be turned against the Mount Etna line where the decisive battle will be fought.

There the Germans were still piling in reniforcements and enjoying the advantages of high ground in the center of their line and a system of rivers and streams for defense on their left.

Praising the Americans, who had slashed nearly 200 miles across Sicily from Gela in 12 days and captured 27,000 prisoners, and lauding their Canadian Allies, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Allied ground troops commander, declared both armies were destined to become the finest in the world.

"The Americans are very fine fighting troops, indeed," he said, declaring they had improved 100 per cent since they gained their first experience in actual combat in Tunisia.

Japs Left Big Airfield On Attu, Nazis Say

London (Saturday), July 24 (INS). The Japanese in June completed construction of a big airfield on the Aleutian Island of Attu large enough to permit America's biggest bombers to reach Hokkaido Island, just north of the Japanese mainland, the German radio said today in a Tokyo dispatch.

Catholic Paper Blames Duce For Rome Raid

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 23.—The Catholic Review, official organ of the Archdioceses of Baltimore and Washington, in an editorial today placed upon Mussolini entire responsibility for the bombing of Rome.

"Mussolini did contrive cunningly to place arsenals of destruction near the churches we love, in the city which is home to all of us as Catholics," the editorial stated, continuing:

"We believe the bombing of Rome was determined on in agony of spirit—not through the wish to bomb it but through the conviction it had to be done—done, with every effort to spare the sacred places.

"There has been some hypocrisy in some circles in the protests against the bombing of Rome, just as there has been protests from some hypocrites concerning the bombing of other cities and the destruction of churches in other lands. Hitler, who has tried to drive Christ from Germany and other lands, has raised a cry of protest against churches destroyed in Germany though his men wrecked churches, in England, in Poland, in Holland, in other invaded countries. He is the same Hitler who, with his atheistic co-destructionists, has lamented the crumbling of churches. . . .

"As for Mussolini, his protests are as sounding brass, his tears crocodilean. . . .

"And who above all other men has been more responsible for the bombing of Rome than Mussolini himself, who schemingly and provacitively built his arsenals near the very heart of Christendom? He is more to blame than anyone else. . . .

"We Catholics are in agony of spirit. We want victory that we may have peace. America is dear to us and America must win.

"And yet . . . every one of us . . . wish things might have been otherwise, that we could have acted otherwise. Our President and the men who manned the ships on Monday feel as Catholics the world over feel, wish things could have been otherwise."

French Decorate Allen, Roosevelt and Downs

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 23 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Terry Allen, commander of the American "Fighting First" Infantry Division in Sicily, his deputy commander, Brig. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt, and his aide, Maj. Kenneth Downs, former war correspondent, have received the French Croix de Guerre from Gen. Louis Koeltz of the French Nineteenth Corps, it was announced today.

Strikes and Peace Riots Reported Sweeping Italy

Madrid dispatches to the London Daily Mail, quoting "diplomatic sources" in Berlin.

The Nazis are assuming that an Allied assault on Italy will immediately follow the expected fall of Sicily, the Madrid advices reported, adding that a swift capitulation of Mussolini's regime is anticipated as soon as invaders set foot on the Italian mainland.

Peace Feeler Reported

New York, July 23 (AP).—A British broadcast, quoting the Swedish newspaper Nya Dagligt Allehanda, said tonight that Italy, Hungary and Rumania recently asked the Vatican to mediate for a separate peace, but the Vatican refused to negotiate.

The broadcast, recorded by C. B. S. said "this has not yet been confirmed in London."

The newspaper said the peace feelers were made by Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Ambassador to the Holy See, Nicolas Kallay, Hungarian Prime Minister, who visited the Vatican in April, and Mihail Antonescu, Rumanian Foreign Minister, who was in Rome recently.

New Allied Thrust?

Istanbul, July 23 (AP).—A growing conviction here today is that the Allies are about to strike in the eastern Mediterranean to link up with the Soviet offensive in Russia.

Balkan unrest appeared to be increasing steadily and it was learned the Germans are taking over complete command of all Greek ports and the Corinth Canal region.

From Rumania, Marshal Ion Antonescu, leader of the state, sent two divisions to reinforce garrisons in Bucovina, Bessarabia and Odessa against the possibility of a Russian breakthrough.

In Bulgaria, Sofia police were called out last Tuesday to quell rioting, a recently returned traveler said.

Axis Moving As Planned, Says Berlin

By the Associated Press

London, July 22.—The Axis reported today the triple loss of Palermo, Marsala and Trapani but sought to mask defeat by presenting movements of their forces as planned concentration in the northeastern part of Sicily.

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, German military commentator, said in a broadcast over the German overseas radio, recorded by the British Ministry of Information, that the "systematic evacuation" of western Sicily was "according to plan" and that Allied moves attempting to hamper the Axis "disengagement" action and to trap large forces have been "successfully repelled."

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels in his weekly article in Das Reich blamed "acts of God" for recent Axis reversals, but at the same time endeavored to assure the German people that victory was guaranteed.

Goebbels belittled the importance of the Allied thrust through Sicily, classing the invasion as a "modest first installment" on an Allied second front.

Woman's Work

The Post published the other day the story of a Department of Agriculture employe who quit her job because it was costing her more than it was worth. Neither the rise in living costs nor the comparatively modest rate of pay—$160 per month—is primarily responsible for putting this young woman "in the red." The fact is that she has a job to do in the home, of minding an infant, and that she is paying a maid more than she can afford to do that job for her.

"I hate to be unpatriotic and quit my job," this young mother is reported to have said. But honestly—it's too big an investment, that's all." The assumption is, of course, that she is serving her country and furthering the war effort by taking a minor position that could be equally well filled by thousands of other young women and leaving her infant to the care of a hired girl. What she has done, in fact, is to create more demands for domestic labor. Instead of lightening the strain on our labor reserves, she has increased it.

If these were normal times, there would be no reason to question the motives of the woman who prefers a job to homework. Generally speaking, however, the women who work for limited pay, hiring others to perform the domestic chores that would otherwise fall to their lot, are a small minority of all workers. The great majority of women working outside the home are forced to earn their own living or else they are compelled to supplement the inadequate earnings of the family head. The war, however, has not only put pressure on married women to seek jobs outside the home, but it has created a restlessness that often makes it difficult to distinguish between a bona fide patriotic urge to be assisting the war effort and the desire for a change that would create more problems than it helps to solve. The unattached woman may find that she is making a genuine contribution to the war effort by taking employment, even though the actual returns in dollars and cents may be negligible. The woman whose employment leaves a family uncared for or else necessitates hiring help to look out for them is making a very puny contribution to the joint war effort by taking a paid job, unless she is possessed of exceptional skill.

Third Drive

The third war-loan drive scheduled for September is heralded by Secretary Morgenthau as the "largest financing program in the history of the world." The goal set—15 billion dollars—is, indeed, stupendous. However, the second war-loan drive of last April brought in 18½ billion dollars, though the amount aimed at was only 13 billions, while the initial December drive produced over 12 billions instead of the 9 billions originally sought. The size of the borrowing operation, therefore, no longer has power to startle the public. The feature of the coming loan drive that distinguishes it from its predecessors is that sales are to be confined to individuals, business corporations, insurance companies and other financial institutions holding the savings of the people. No sales will be effected by means of credits to Government accounts entered on the books of commercial banks—credits which ultimately swell the total volume of demand deposits (purchasing power) in the hands of the public and thus have an inflationary effect. To be sure, the Government will be forced to borrow from the commercial banks betweentimes in order to finance that part of the budgetary deficit not covered by non-inflationary borrowing of savings. But the segregation of the two types of borrowing operations makes it possible during the period of the drive for salesmen to concentrate wholeheartedly on the task of building up investment support.

There is not the slightest reason to doubt that the goal set by the Treasury will be easily reached and may be overpassed. But there is great uncertainty regarding the amounts that men and women wage earners and salaried workers can be induced to contribute to the loan fund. Last April the amounts subscribed by individuals were disappointingly small when compared with the total volume of purchases. To increase individual contributions, especially so soon after the introduction of the withholding tax, will test the persuasive powers and the staying quality of the Treasury's volunteer salesmen.

Millions of people who are either not buying war bonds regularly or not buying them in proportion to their means ought to be reached by more direct and energetic appeals than have heretofore been addressed to them. The coming sales drive offers an opportunity not merely for soliciting one-time contributions from such people, but for persuading larger numbers of them to make regular weekly or monthly contributions for purchasing war bonds. For it is the idle dollars in the hands of individuals that constitute a potential demand for consumer goods and services, and threaten to produce inflation. Accumulated savings held by business corporations, insurance companies and mutual savings banks are going to be invested in any case—and for the most part in Government securities. Such institutional reserves do not present any current threat to the price structure.

No doubt the Treasury will find it easy to attract heavy subscriptions from corporate and institutional investors in view of the rapidity with which demand deposits belonging to such groups are being built up by Government spending. A recent investigation made by the New York Federal Reserve Bank indicates that a preponderant proportion of the total increase in commercial bank deposits during the past year or more went to industrial corporations and financial institutions instead of individuals. Although the methods of estimate are open to criticism, they suggest that recent estimates of individual savings have been too high. However, there is no gainsaying the fact that vast sums disbursed by the Government are passing through the hands of the workers of the country. They may not have been saving as much as had been supposed, but there is no doubt that they are in a position to save and invest a good deal more than they actually have. They must save and invest a good deal more, indeed, to justify Secretary Morgenthau's faith in the system of voluntary bond purchases and prevent recourse to compulsory savings.

Military Rome

The President at his press conference yesterday helped to restore a sense of proportion about the bombing of the military installations in Rome. What perturbation has been expressed seems to have been due in part to the overelaborate propaganda preceding it. This has been based upon the supposition that there would be a volume of protests in Allied countries. By anticipating the case, we have helped to prepare it. It would have been better, it seems to us, if the Allied governments had shown the world ahead of time the nature of Rome's importance as a military center. The fact is that all roads in northern Italy lead to Rome and the same roads lead out of Rome to southern Italy. In other words, Rome is the greatest junction in all Italy, and as such is a legitimate military target. If the gutting of the railroad yards interfered with Axis resistance in Sicily, if to that extent it helped to shorten the campaign and in the process to save lives, then, in our conviction, there is no argument as to its justification.

But those who agree that the raid was a military necessity have felt the need to base such a defense of it on dubious grounds. It was to these folk that the President addressed his observations. The raid, he said, had nothing to do with retaliation, and no justification for the act should be sought in the criminal and savage misdeeds of the Germans and Italians. To be sure, they have regarded nothing as sacred among the memorials of the past—from Westminster Hall, the greatest sanctuary of man's liberty, to the shrines of religious worship in half a dozen countries, such as that exquisite relic of the Middle Ages, the Church of St. Sophia at Saloniki. This destruction, moreover, has been the result of indiscriminate bombing. But these acts of barbarism were not the backdrop for the precisely executed attack on Rome's military installations. If there had been anything retaliatory in the attack, the extraordinary precautions which were made to gut the military heart out of Rome would not have been taken. Revenge, it is said, is the sin of the uninstructed, but there was nothing blind or brutal in that great raid.

Nor, as the President further observed, did the raid partake of psychological warfare. Specifically the attack could not be described as "a warning to the Italian people," as is sometimes said. Of course, if the Italians give in, then they will be spared destruction. But, as long as they stay in the war, it would be the height of foolhardiness to relax the attack on Italy's military objectives. The object of war is to impose your will on the enemy. Indubitably, if we are to save ourselves from becoming as barbarian as the barbarian enemy, there must be moral distinctions in the achievement of that aim, and one of them was illustrated by the raid on the communications center of Rome. This was so staged as to blot out a military objective. In the case of Axis bombing attacks, which wound up in Britain by the Baedeker raids on cathedral cities, there was no such discrimination. Beyond this kind of distinction, however, the will of the enemy can be broken only when an army is singleminded and relentless. Certainly a decision to spare the communications center of Rome on the grounds that a lovely church might be hit would call for similar decisions all over Italy and beyond. Nothing would be more likely to erode our warmindedness and jeopardize our victory. If ever the German proverb that we must use our eyes for seeing lest we have to use them for weeping were applicable, it is to this disputation.

It is, of course, true that Rome exists apart from Italy. And that means not only Vatican City, but Rome itself. Rome is the Mecca of the entire Roman Catholic world, and, moreover, is venerated by all Christendom. Such an argument for sparing the military fringe of Rome, however, could be turned on those who use it. It is precisely because of the unique status of Rome that all good Christians want to see Rome restored to its pristine glory. At present the Eternal City is one of the seats of power for a military machine which is seeking to dethrone God and man over the habitable world. This is what explains the reluctance of Mussolini to declare Rome an "open city." If the Duce had to yield to our request and Italian clamor, he would have to demobilize Rome, reroute military supplies, dismantle and remove the factories, and abandon the city as a focal point for north-south transport. It is safe to say that the Fascists will do no such thing till they are prepared to surrender. Till then it must be the object of our war to press forward the liberation of Rome, as well as lesser seats of our Christian civilization, from the yoke of the infidel. It is this desire that makes this war a crusade. It is this desire that makes the recent and any other similar raid justifiable. If we consult the depth rather than the tumult of the soul—which is understandably torn by the desolation of war—surely there can be no other answer.

Red Army

It is now three weeks since the German army launched its belated summer offensive on the Eastern Front. That offensive, despite the tremendous weight of armor thrown into the scales by the Nazis, was soon stopped in its tracks. During the past fortnight it is the Russians who have been doing the attacking. Town after town has fallen to them, and today the Red army stands at the very gates of Orel.

What is at stake in the Orel fighting is far more than who is to possess that strategically important city. Orel is a glittering prize, one that would crown the Red offensive with success even if it went no further. For with Orel in their hands through rail communications could be restored between Moscow and a point just above Belgorod which the Russians are also besieging. But that is not all. A considerable German force is today pocketed in the Orel sector with the Russian pincers closing in around it. So another Stalingrad may be in the making, unless, advised by what happened at Stalingrad, Hitler decides on a large-scale retreat of his forces in and around Orel. Already the fighting there, according to the Russians, has cost Germany 50,000 lives, 1148 tanks, 1602 guns and 900 planes during the last 10 days alone.

So far Hitler has manifested no disposition to abandon Orel, and has, in fact, continued to rush reinforcements to that threatened strong point. But it is also apparent that Germany's defensive strength on the Eastern Front is declining as previously its offensive power declined. Proof of this is to be found in the potentially very significant circumstance that the Russians appear to have begun an offensive in the Lake Ladoga region as well as in the Caucasus. It is too early to envisage a large-scale German retreat well to the west of their present lines. That is a real possibility, nonetheless.

Forgetting The Others

Thursday we paid our respects to the ill-considered efforts of Navy spokesmen to frighten Americans into producing more by predicting that the war in the Pacific will probably not be over for another six years. Such bogeyman tactics are not likely to get anywhere with our people. But they may have a boomerang effect on certain of our Allies. The Chinese, for example, have been at war for six years. In their case there is no danger of their war effort being undermined by complacence. It can very easily be undermined by despair. That is no doubt why Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, normally a pessimist, found it necessary very recently to paint a glowing picture of Allied strength and Japanese weakness. This, he told his people, in effect, is the last long mile. Be of good cheer; the war isn't going to last forever; Japan is nearing the end of her rope.

But if such statements as those of Chiang Kai-shek act like a shot-in-the-arm to the Chinese people, gloomy prognostications of the kind issued by Vice Admiral Horne with his talk of a fleet seven times as great as our present one and no victory before 1949 can have the effect of a drenching cold shower. Elementary as it is, and obvious though the point ought to be at this stage of the war, it looks as though some of our officials keep forgetting that this is a global war. That means that no separation is possible between the home front and the rest of the world. A course in psychological warfare for our official spokesmen would not seem to be out of order.

THE CONCH SHELL

Lift it in your two hands,
Hold it to your ear;
Heavy, smooth and beautiful,—
What is that you hear?

All the singing ocean
Far off, faint but clear;
So diminished, tiny,
Now brought very near.

Murmuring where palm trees
Grow from coral sand,
And the warm, blue waters
Lap the curved white strand.

Thundering on gray rocks,
Charging on the shore,
Lonely, cold and desolate;
These and countless more

Held within the hollow
Of the conch's dark shell;
Lift it in your two hands
And hear what it will tell.

Mexican Report

SOLUTION OF one of Latin America's knottiest war situations appears on the way as result of the Mexican-American statement Saturday afternoon that the recommendations of the Joint Economic Commission will be put into effect without delay. This commission, which came out of the meeting between Presidents Avila Camacho and Roosevelt in late April, last week turned in a complete blueprint for easing some of Mexico's war difficulties.

It also set a pattern that can be used to ease the change-over from war to peace for both countries.

Mexico, like all Latin America, is today exporting far more than she is importing and is short many supplies. We cannot possibly furnish enough goods to relieve all their stress now. But Mexico makes a special case for more help because she can ship overland to us and is being heavily drawn on for supplies that we need.

Part of the stress in Mexico undoubtedly is a natural consequence of her war contribution, but a free-for-all scramble to make the most of the situation by Mexicans and Americans alike has added to it considerably.

American Money

American money has flooded into Mexico looking for bonanza opportunities. Mexicans with their pockets full for the first time in a generation want to start new enterprises and ride the boom. Americans with obsolete machinery to unload have created the idea that this country has plenty of machinery after all. Mexicans have bought machinery here, but not the kind that makes what Mexico needs most. All this has tangled relations.

The Joint Economic Commission was set up to bring order out of this chaos and to get down to business on what Mexico really needs and what we actually can spare her.

One of Mexico's strongest pleas—and a first recommendation by the commission—is for equipment to produce more food. Mexican land has been lying idle for lack of tools. Crops have rotted for lack of trucks. Meanwhile, Mexico's rice, beans and cattle poured over the border to us. But exports of nonsurplus foods have been stopped and if the commission's report means anything at all, Mexico will get both tools and trucks.

A special subcommittee was set up to thresh out Mexico's general minimum import needs and the commission urges prompt attention to their findings. It also says that Mexico should have transportation equipment and advises stimulating fishing to step up food supply.

But the matter of supplies for Mexican industry cannot be disposed of so simply. To begin with, there are two different sets of ideas about what Mexico wants. Individuals want plants that will make money. The government wants industries that will make the national economy sounder and aid development. They do not want plants that will not pay after the war and will present a problem then.

The industrialization of Mexico, the Avila Camacho administration's most cherished project, calls for development along three lines.

Electric Power

First, Mexico must have more electric power. Her coal supplies are not great and are located in the far north. She has oil but neither coal nor oil can supply motive force for factories as cheaply as electricity. Mexico is getting some new plants, but demand is still out ahead of supply.

The second important step that Mexico sees is installation of new plants to make the semifinished and finished iron and steel products. She has great iron mines and makes pig iron and some steel. But she wants to make her own rails, simple farm tools, piping, corrugated sheeting, iron for bridges, culverts, irrigation systems and building.

This would help her tremendously in making three basic improvements, in communications, housing and food growing.

Her third need is for factories to make semimanufactured materials for her finished-products plants. For example, Mexico has lumber and makes furniture, but has to import high-grade plywood for her furniture factories. Mexico wants to do more of this intermediate manufacturing at home.

The Joint Commission has recommended that as much of this industrialization as fits in with war realities should be got under way now. It also urged that a permanent committee should prepare for the war's end.

The idea is that Mexico should work out now how she wants to spend the money that is piling up to her credit. A sound developmental plan would make it possible for the country to shift from war to peace without economic chaos. At the same time, knowing what they will want will guide us in shifting our production from war. This pattern, if followed by enough of our customers, shows a way to save this country severe shocks as the change-over is made.

As The End Nears

By Barnet Nover

Sicilian Campaign: Final Phase

WITH THE CAPTURE by American troops of Palermo the Sicilian campaign entered its final phase.

The Allies are in possession of more than four-fifths of the island and are closing in on the remaining northeast portion. The German forces in the Catania sector now face the unpleasant choice of standing their ground and being surrounded and cut to pieces, of surrendering, or of attempting an evacuation by way of battered Messina and the narrow straits separating Sicily from the toe of the Italian boot.

Whatever General Kesselring may decide to do, the end of the struggle in Sicily is now definitely in sight. It is likely to come within a few days.

IN CONTRAST to the Italians who, at best, have offered only perfunctory resistance, the Germans have fought hard and well and held their ground for days in the face of pressure from the redoubtable British Eighth Army.

This point needs underlining. It is a reminder of the difficulties that will face us once we begin driving toward the heart of Axis strength.

It is also wise to recall, in this connection, that all but a small percentage of American casualties in the last war occurred on the Western Front in the months between August and November, that is during the period when the German army was being steadily pushed back and after the German high command had abandoned all hope of avoiding defeat.

The heaviest and bloodiest and bitterest fighting of the war in Europe is still ahead of us.

BUT IF THE SICILIAN struggle is indicative of Germany's continued strength, it is also symptomatic of her growing weakness.

Under existing circumstances Germany is no more in a position to defend all of Europe alone than she was in a position to defend all of Sicily alone.

The defense of Sicily was primarily entrusted to Italian troops, not because the German strategists believed this was the best thing to do, but because they had no choice in the matter.

After the Allied landings of July 10, as before, the bulk of the Wehrmacht had to be kept on the Eastern Front. Instead of being able to withdraw any German troops from Russia for employment in the Sicilian theater, the German high command has found it necessary to rush reinforcements to the Eastern Front. Indeed, following the failure of the German offensive of July 5, it has been the turn of the Red army to take the offensive. And that offensive has now reached the point where it threatens to produce another Stalingrad for the Third Reich.

SO DESPITE MUSSOLINI'S clamor for more German aid and for all of Hitler's recognition of the fact that if Italy goes down Germany's difficulties will increase enormously, no large German reinforcements could be sent to Sicily.

It is true that the Germans made up in valor what they lacked in numbers. They held their ground at Catania. They contained, or believed they had contained, what they deemed the most powerful and best seasoned Allied force. But while their strategy may at best have delayed, it could not prevent, the final outcome.

SICILY is not a special case, however.

The situation that has obtained in Sicily is similar to that which obtained in Tunisia earlier and in Libya and Egypt before that. In those theaters, as in Sicily, the Germans merely provided the leadership and the stiffening; the bulk of the forces opposing the Allies had, perforce, to be non-Germans.

The same thing will be true when the Allies get around to invading the Italian Peninsula and the Balkans. There, too, the Nazis will have to depend in large measure on non-German troops.

The point is that Germany now lacks the manpower needed to wage a large-scale war, even a defensive war, on the Eastern Front, and at the same time adequately defend the southern and western perimeter of European Fortress. So the nearer the Allies approach the heart of the Axis the more Germany will be dependent on her satellites to provide those indispensable reserves she needs to wage a multi-front war.

THE ITALIANS have manifested a complete lack of heart in the fighting in Sicily, home territory though it is for them. But can we assume that the Italians now garrisoned in Yugoslavia and Greece and France, the Bulgars, Rumanians, Hungarians and other satellites will do any better when the test comes?

All of Germany's satellites, and not Italy alone, are dispirited. All of them are convinced the Axis has lost the war. All of them are looking for a way out. And should they come face to face with Allied invasion forces Hitler's Balkan satellites may fight as halfheartedly and surrender as enthusiastically as the Italians have done.

The Battle of Sicily is the coming Battle of Europe writ small.

Mr. Lippmann

A few days ago a Mr. Kenneth Crawford wrote a very caustic letter re Mr. Walter Lippmann's column concerning Mr. Demaree Bess' inside information in North Africa.

Mr. Lippmann's point was that Mr. Bess was singled out for special information which if given to one should have been made accessible to all reporters covering that area in order to keep the public correctly and impartially informed.

Mr. Lippmann in no way intimated or inferred that he—Mr. Lippmann—had missed out on something, and his column that day was not inspired by personal jealousy—as Mr. Crawford said.

Mr. Lippmann may have been misinformed, but Mr. Lippmann's integrity and clear thinking are world renowned. It is common knowledge that he has no axes to grind, no bones to pick, no fish to fry. He is head and shoulders above most so-called leaders of our country in trying to keep the basic issues clearly before the people—divested of their yards of red tape and clouds of political dust. His reasoning is always as clear and logical as a mathematical problem. He is one of the few who does not include general "facts"—from "unimpeachable official sources." LOUISE R. FRANK.

"Nazi" Viereck

Your editorial of July 19, "Nazi Stooge," carries the kind of punch that lands squarely where it will do the most good. Let the conviction of George Sylvester Viereck stand as a warning to others of his ilk who have thus far escaped punishment for their crimes. May the day of their reckoning be not far distant.

It has taken much courageous, painstaking, intelligent work on the part of public investigators and prescutors to bring Viereck and one or two of his associates to the bar of justice.

The great majority of the loyal, American people are indebted to The Post and other fearless members of the press for their support of high minded public servants in the performance of their duty.

Reply To "Monitor"

"Monitor" in The Post for July 15 either does not know, or professes not to know, the distinction between a planned economy and a wartime economy. He is ignorant of the basic fact that the former seeks ever more abundant production and consumption of goods in order to raise the national standard of living, while wartime economy must pare civilian services and goods to the bone in the interest of military requirements.

It is too bad "Monitor" has suffered so greatly! Especially since he evidently lacks the solace of understanding any of the causes for the abuses of which he complains. (1) Too bad about the ration stamps; would "Monitor" prefer hoarding, or would he like civilians to be allowed to buy the Nation's food supply unrestrictedly, at the expense of our servicemen and our Allies? (2) Too bad about his delayed laundry, but just possibly some of the former employes are either in the armed forces or are engaged in war production jobs even more essential than returning "Monitor's" shirts promptly; (3) Too bad about the "ill-mannered subordinate" at the car inspection service, who evidently failed to realize "Monitor's" importance; (4) Too bad "Monitor" was again subjected to the whims of a "subordinate" at the gasoline ration board and the fuel board, who evidently lacked time to explain to him that planes, ships, and trucks on our fighting front need gas and oil, too, and have perhaps almost as much claim to the Nation's fuel supply as has "Monitor"; (5) Too bad about income tax forms and tax payments; has "Monitor" an alternate plan for providing funds to buy those planes, tanks, guns and ships? Clubs For Air Wardens

An air-raid warden in Brooklyn has just been roundly denounced in the press and by the sob sisters because he carried a club for his own protection as he patrolled his beat in a lonely and tough section.

It is enough to ask men to volunteer to serve as auxiliary policemen, without pay, without expecting them to patrol lonely places in the dead of night armed with a powder puff.

Vacation Discussion—1943

"Well, let's decide on our vacation, Wingate!"

"Let's! There's an outside chance something might come of it, Jennie, my dear."

"When shall we take our month's outing this year?"

"Our what?"

"Our three weeks."

"Oh, well, make it two weeks, then!"

"That's more like it. Let's take them in November."

"Where can we go in July or August for that matter?"

"You make it so involved, Wingate. Don't you want a vacation?"

"Certainly. But every time I begin planning one I imagine Eastman is watching me."

"Mr. Eastman says the Government wants people to take vacations."

"Yeah. All he asks is that they don't use autos, buses or Pullman cars, that they don't travel very far and that they avoid starting off or returning on week ends. You get a nervous collapse just trying to figure out how to do it."

"Our grandfathers and grandmothers took vacations without automobiles."

"Not in the places where we've been used to taking ours, dear."

"Traveling by railroad coach isn't a hardship, is it?"

"Not if you don't bruise easily."

"Lots of people travel that way when they need to go away for a rest."

"That's what makes them need to go away for the rest."

"You're just getting soft, Wingate. You need toughening up."

"A vacation this year is just the trick to do it. But assume we get some place. What do we use for transportation after we get there? You hate mules and I understand they don't keep camels."

"We can stay put after we arrive at the hotel."

"We never have."

"But this is different. A perfectly quiet vacation would do me good."

"It would be awful for me, I'd have to listen to all your squawks."

"If we just had to stay in one place and not do any running around for excitement we would get a wonderful rest."

"But we couldn't stand a wonderful rest."

"Why not?"

"We'd come home refreshed and fit for work. We'd feel vigorous and healthy. Do you want to face a thing like that?"

"Oh, if a vacation is going to do that to us I suppose we had better drop the idea."

"Precisely. We'll spend our vacation at home just reading about the miserable time all our friends are having spending their vacations away from home. It will be wonderful."

"Wingate, you're terrific!"

It is hard to think of Naples, beautiful, colorful and drowsy in the blazing sun, now a bruised and battered shambles. Not any harder, of course, than to think of all the lovely cities wrecked by the Axis, unless you know the city and had tender memories of personal experiences there. Naples, sloping down to the blue bay . . . Vesuvius smoking in the distance . . . the excursion boats steaming off to Capri . . . the trains full of tourists wheezing off to Pompeii . . . the merry buzzing of the sidewalk cafes . . . the continuous parades and fiestas . . . the good humor of everybody . . . these are memories as of another world that come back with the news that the city is now an ashpile.

Direct Taxation

A heavy income tax, rather than continuing the inequitable indirect taxes, would arouse us from our lethargy. Congressmen favor taxes which do not hurt. This is a harmful policy because we do not know how much taxes we are paying. There is no desire to see to it that our money is not spent foolishly.

I propose taxing all incomes without exceptions. This will inevitably lower indirect taxes and make us aware of our financial interests in our Government. A real and honest democracy can only be achieved by an interested and alert people. BERNARD J. COHEN.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On The Doctrine Of Military Necessity

SWISS PAPERS report that the Germans are already taking steps which show that they realize there is no such thing in fact as the European fortress. They are preparing their real defenses not on the shores of the European peninsula but within the continent in the area which includes the industrial region of Germany itself, the Low Countries, northern and eastern France, Bohemia, Austria, Poland, and also the granary of the Danube Valley. These reports are almost certainly true in the sense that it is this region, rather than the whole of what is called Europe, which Germany must hold or be finally and utterly defeated.

LIPPMANN

For what the Germans have called "Europe" is strategically an optical illusion which has also deceived many, perhaps most, of the peoples opposed to them. It is an illusion of the map which causes men to suppose that the Mediterranean Sea marks the southern boundary of Europe. In fact, the Mediterranean lies inside Europe, and the southern shores of the Mediterranean, that is to say the northern shores of Africa, are now and always have been a strategic, political, economic and historic part of Europe. In truth the Allies were never driven out of Europe, as Mr. Churchill with his genius saw from the first, as long as they had a foothold in Egypt.

THE MEDITERRANEAN is in fact a great inland European lake, and by far the most important highway between western and eastern Europe. The only overland communications between the west and the east of Europe are in the flat plains north of the mountains. With them alone it is impossible to hold the whole of Europe. The Mediterranean is the main highway to Italy, to the Balkans, to Turkey, and to Russia, and he who dominates the Mediterranean is in control of the central system of the communications of Europe.

It is an error, therefore, to think that the invasion of Europe began with the landing in Sicily. In fact, the Sicilian campaign marks an important advance, like the crossing of a wide river, which brings us nearer to the heart of the German power. It is a later phase of an operation which carries on the advance begun months ago at El Alamein, Casablanca and Algiers. When the advance has been carried into Corsica, Sardinia, and northern Italy, we are still outside of Germany but we shall stand in the geographical heart of Europe.

AS WE proceed farther into Europe, we shall be confronted again and again with the moral dilemma which has been presented to us by the bombing of the Roman railway yards. For the things we cherish in Europe, its people, its cities, its shrines and monuments and irreplaceable treasures, are in the hands of the enemy. It is impossible to strike at the enemy without injuring them, and again and again, and not only in Rome, this tragic condition has faced us. We have maintained a blockade, knowing that our friends would starve before our enemies suffered. We have bombed the cities of northern France, knowing that in order to strike at the enemy's power death and destruction would also be the lot of those whom we have come to liberate. In battering at the gates of the prison we injure those who are the captives within it. We are haunted by the dreadful realization of what the innocent must endure before we can break open the prison doors and strike off the chains which bind them.

We are face to face, in short, with the awful reality of the evil thing we are fighting, that like a monster he stands there at bay clutching to his person the peoples and their cities we must deliver from his clutches. What can we do to shorten and mitigate this agony except to resolve to strike at him all the more swiftly and relentlessly, hoping to shake him loose and bring him down before the death and destruction are universal?

YET FOR our own moral health and peace of soul, let us be careful that we do not infect ourselves with the evil with which we are at war. Let us be very careful indeed not to invoke the doctrine of military necessity and expediency lightly and too easily. That doctrine is the heart of the curse which our enemies have brought upon mankind, and there have been many alarming signs in the past few months that the infection has come into the stream of our own reasoning. It is a mortal infection if it spreads; let us then be very vigilant against those who would justify whatever they may happen to be doing, or whatever it occurs to them it would be convenient to do, on the grounds of "military necessity."

Not everything that a general or an admiral happens to believe is to be accepted without question. Never must we relinquish the fundamental principle of our constitutional existence which is the supremacy of the civilian over the military power. And we must be no less scrupulously on guard against an even subtler danger, several times apparent in recent months, which is the tendency of civilian officials to invoke military necessity, and to hide behind the soldiers, in carrying out their own debatable policies.

Postwar Germany

Roosevelt Evasive

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt had nothing to say at his press-radio conference yesterday when a reporter tried to draw him out on the "postwar disposition of Germany."

After saying there was nothing on that, he added a lot of suggestions had been made on that question in the last two or three years.

He also declined to express himself on formation in Moscow of the "National Committee of Free Germany," which is calling on the German people to overthrow Nazism. He said he had received nothing official on this organization.

Moscow's appeal to the Germans to overthrow Hitler and make an immediate peace, launched through the new "National Committee" was viewed here yesterday as a trial balloon of more than ordinary importance.

Russia Quite Interested

The committee, with obvious Soviet inspiration, appealed in a manifesto for the formation of a "Genuine National German Government," which would immediately cease military operations, recall the troops to the Reich's original frontiers and embark on peace negotiations.

Washington officialdom shared the reported view in London the manifesto showed Russia's preeminent interest in the peace conditions to be imposed on Germany.

It undoubtedly was intended, it was said, as a propaganda weapon to help the Red army's counter-offensive by weakening the German home front, since it was broadcast to Germany by the Moscow radio.

The Moscow committee also could be a tentative nucleus for a pro-Soviet organization to take over authority in Germany, some quarters believe.

The Soviet government can sit back and watch the reaction among the other United Nations without embarrassment since it has made no public commitment nor has it officially indorsed the Freies Deutschland (Free Germany) movement.

Policy Not Abandoned

The manifesto, in the Washington view, did not necessarily imply Marshal Stalin was abandoning the unconditional surrender policy of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. Unconditional surrender does not mean the refusal to make terms for the enemy surrender, but only that the enemy must accept the terms of the victor.

Washington authorities, on the other hand, were inclined to disagree with the manifesto's assertion if Hitler is overthrown only by the force of Allied armies and not at home, this "will signify the end of (German) national independence and of (German's) state existence, the dismemberment of (the) fatherland."

Some apprehension was expressed privately here that such a statement might stiffen German resistance out of fear the Soviets intend to dominate Germany.

Captured Yank Shot 7 Times; He Escapes, Lives to Tell It

By Stephen Barber
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, July 23.—A story of how he was captured by the Italians in Sicily, shot seven times and left for dead, and yet escaped and made his way back to the American lines, was told today by Pvt. Michael Scambulluri, of Albany, N. Y., a parachute trooper who is recovering in an Allied base hospital in the Middle East.

Scambulluri landed in an area alive with enemy troops and was surrounded and captured before he could join his mates.

"The Italians took me to town and stripped me of everything I had, including food," he said. "I was led to a captain's office in the troop barracks and asked a lot of questions about how many soldiers had been landed and what kind of arms we carried.

"I told them only my name, grade and serial number and refused all other information. When I spoke to the captain in Italian, asking the name of the town, he became enraged and accused me of being a spy. He ordered my hands tied behind my back and I was led out of the barracks and stood against a wall in the courtyard.

A Little Rough Stuff

"It looked as though they were going to begin some rough stuff. I wasn't far wrong. The captain walked about 20 feet away from me, took out his revolver and fired one shot at me.

"All hell seemed to burn inside of me and I collapsed. The captain continued firing at me, poursix more shots into me as I lay there on the ground. I was moaning and did not know what to do, but did know that I was not hurt in any vital spot."

Scambulluri said a soldier, apparently dissatisfied with his captain's work, lobbed two hand grenades in his direction, the force of which spun him around completely. He added, however, that he was still conscious when he heard the captain give orders for his burial the following morning.

"I heard the group walk away," he continued, "and when it got quiet I wiggled to a tree about 20 feet away and worked myself to my feet. I don't know where I got the strength, but I managed to get out of the place and across the fields into some nearby woods.

"I half walked, half crawled through the brush until I came across an old, deserted cemetery. I stopped and sawed through the ropes binding my hands on the edge of a sharp gravestone."

Tore Wrists Badly

Scambulluri said he tore his wrists so badly in getting free that he collapsed. When he recovered consciousness he made his way through the woods and at dawn was found by a group of civilians, who ran to him, crying "Peace, Peace!"

They helped him to where the American soldiers were advancing and he was given first aid and taken to a field hospital.

But that wasn't the end of Scambulluri's story. After he was placed aboard a hospital ship it was bombed and sunk at its moorings. Later another hospital ship brought him to safety.

(Allied headquarters in North Africa announced last week that a hospital ship, brightly illuminated and clearly marked, had been bombed and sunk off the Sicilian coast during the early days of the invasion.)

C.I.O. Moves In Politics

Midwest Meeting

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—Midwestern C. I. O. representatives today adopted a resolution proposing a political alliance for labor, starting with the new C. I. O. political action committee and embracing A. F. L., Railroad Brotherhood and other unions and consumer, farmer and "progressive" groups throughout the Nation.

The action was taken at the second meeting called by the C. I. O.'s political action committee. The resolution also was approved at the first, held in Philadelphia July 10. Similar conferences will be held in Alabama for the South and California for the West. More than 200 delegates from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota and Wisconsin attended today's session.

The Midwest members also urged passage of a Senate resolution by Senator Scott Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois to permit polls to be kept open until 8 p. m. in all Federal elections.

In calling the meeting, Sidney Hillman, chairman of the new committee and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, said what he termed the "antilabor wave in Congress" made it "obvious something must be done for the sake of labor and the Nation."

The political group which his committee seeks to conceive would not sponsor any third party movement, Hillman said, but would work for labor approved candidates within existing parties.

Egg Shortage, Huge Black Market Feared

By the Associated Press

There will be a critical egg shortage in this country by next December, a spokesman for the Office of Price Administration said yesterday.

"It will be the worst egg shortage in this Nation's history," he said. "It will be accompanied by a bad black market. No plan for midwinter egg rationing is being considered. .I don't see how we could do it, the problem is so huge."

[The Agriculture Department, through its Bureau of Agricultural Economics, reporting that egg production during May was 13 per cent larger than in May of last year, said:

["Egg production will decline until the seasonal low in November but during the summer and fall months probably will be above that of a year earlier. Civilian supplies of storage shell eggs in the coming out-of-storage season probably will be only moderately smaller than a year earlier. Hence, unless net withdrawals of eggs are unusually large early in the out-of-storage season, supplies of eggs for civilians next fall may be larger than last fall. Civilian egg supplies will decline seasonally from relatively high levels of recent months, however, and will be exceeded by demands."—Editor's Note.]

This is the explanation given by the OPA official for his shortage forecast:

Right now this country is passing the peak of its egg production. Hens do their best laying in spring and early summer, producing in that time 60 per cent of the annual egg supply.

From that early summer peak production falls off to a low point in midwinter.

Normally cold storage eggs help tide Americans over the slack winter months. This year there will be no cold storage eggs for civilians. They will go to the armed forces.

One reason why the control problem is huge and the black market can be serious:

Approximately six million farmers supply the Nation's eggs and 98 per cent of them have flocks of less than 400 hens. They are spread across the country.

England tried to solve its own egg shortage problems by buying up all the eggs but even there the black market in them thrives.

OPA says Britain considers its egg black market the hardest to crush, since producers do not always sell to the government but hold back eggs for better private prices from black market dealers.

Roosevelt Says He Has Lots of Eggs

President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday that he was lucky, because he has lots of eggs up at his Hyde Park estate.

So many eggs has the President, he disclosed, that he is selling some of them.

Mr. Roosevelt's remark came when he was asked about conflicting statements of the War Food Administration and the OPA on the egg situation—the WFA saying there were plenty of eggs and the OPA warning of an egg shortage.

Senators' War Preview

Junket Group Calls On Gen. Marshall

Five Senators, soon to take off on a two-month globe-girdling round of the United Nations' far flung battle fronts, yesterday received an "encouraging" preview of how the war goes before leaving on the war's first conducted "Cook's tour."

Under instructions from three pivot Senate committees, the five will take a first-hand look at the fighting. They will keep their eyes peeled on conditions behind the lines — transport and supplies, health and morale of troops, supporting facilities, and civilian war agencies in the field.

From Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, yesterday they received an intimate description of what to expect and how our side is doing. All agreed it looked good.

Some time in the next few days the senatorial five will don their noncombatant uniforms, pocket special identification cards issued to them by the War Department, and hop off.

They are: Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, representing the Senate Appropriations Committee and leader of the group; Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky and Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts, representing the Military Affairs Committee, and Mead (Democrat) of New York and Brewster (Republican) of Maine, representing the Senate's Truman Investigating Committee.

Senator Chandler, who has been urging more support for Generals MacArthur and Chennault, told reporters he felt "encouraged" following yesterday's conference with Marshall.

"The whole situation in the Pacific has been given more attention recently," said Chandler. "I think there is ample evidence of a great determination to carry the fight to the Japs in the Australian area and in China as well."

Roosevelt Shows Interest

President Roosevelt meanwhile showed a keen interest in the tour during a talk with Senator Russell. Following the White House conference, Russell said he particularly wanted to study transportation and delivery of supplies both to the armed forces and lend-lease recipients. Russell was interested too in what use will be made after the war of airfields, railroads, docks, parts factories and shops the United States has helped finance. "We have a great many billion dollars scattered around over there and I want to know how much will be brought back." He said all of the Senators will want to know first how United States troops "are being taken care of.

"But I think the chief value of this trip to all of us will be the information we bring back for post-war planning," said Russell. "We will know so much more about the civilian populations of other nations and the many problems with which we have to deal."

Chandler agreed with Russell that the postwar benefits of the trip may outweigh all others.

Purpose of Truman Group

The Truman Committee has directed Senators Mead and Brewster to make a six-point study and report to the committee. In addition to transport, supply, United States developed land facilities, and the condition of repair and replacement facilities the Mead-Brewster survey will cover:

Administrative activities in foreign fields outside military lines and particularly any confusion of function.

Arrangements for the distribution of American supplies among civilian populations.

Brewster said he and Mead wanted to know how such civilian agencies as Lend-Lease, OWI, the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation and the Office of Economic Warfare are functioning in the foreign field. He said there were reports of "differences of opinion between them on the spot."

More Night Raid Shelters Needed, Whitehurst Admits

Civilian Defense Chief H. C. Whitehurst announced yesterday that Washington was well provided with air-raid shelters with the exception of night shelters for the downtown area.

The statement was issued in answer to criticism by National Defense Director James M. Landis that most large cities were wanting in proper shelters. He "deplored" the especial lack of shelters which should be available to persons caught on streets during an air raid.

Whitehurst pointed out that 2000 shelters had been provided for District residents but that 1000 more were needed. He said that daytime precautions were sufficient but that night shelters were needed.

Coupon Switch Allows Travel Into and Out of Shortage Area

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Restrictions on motor travel into and out of the Eastern gasoline shortage area were eased by the Office of Price Administration yesterday with a new regulation permitting local ration boards to adjust coupons for such trips upon request.

Since July 21, Eastern motorists have been using A-6 coupons, while those outside of the shortage area have been using A-7's from their new basic books. A-6's were not valid outside the East, while A-7's could not be used in the East.

To overcome this travel bottleneck, particularly since restrictions on vacation travel have been eased, OPA issued the new regulation providing exchange of coupons for prospective trips into or out of the gasoline shortage zone.

The new regulation also gives ration boards serving war plants in the East the power to issue vacation trip authorizations. This permission eliminates the time consuming requirement of receiving vacation authorizations from a warworker's "home" board which may be miles away from the employe's place of employment.

The new regulation, it was pointed out, is another step by OPA to eliminate travel kinks as much as possible until such time as the gasoline situation will allow further lifting of restrictions.

As to the time when some relief may be expected, officials were generally disinclined to speculate, although the latest Petroleum Administration for War bulletin shows that reserve stocks in the East increased slightly a week ago. The stocks, however, are still far below "comfortable" requirements, PAW stressed.

Unit To Aid Trade Groups Formed

Creation of a trade association unit in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, to aid trade associations in solving their problems was announced yesterday. C. J. Judkins, consultant to the Committee for Economic Development, was named chairman of the unit.

Judkins, stressing the need for close cooperation between the Department of Commerce and trade associations, disclosed that Washington has become the country's third most important city for headquarters offices of these associations, more than 700 main or branch offices of national organizations being located here.

U. S. Pilot Bags Messerschmitt 'On His Own'

By Joseph Morton
Associated Press Staff Writer

An Advanced Air Base in North Africa, July 23.—An American fighter pilot flew over Italy without permission yesterday and shot down a German Messerschmitt that intercepted a formation of Flying Fortresses he had met on the way.

His air buddies said they thought the flier, Second Lieut. John T. Hanton, South Minneapolis, ought to get a decoration for his volunteer feat. And Air Force higher-ups indicated they weren't taking too seriously the fact that Hanton did the job without an official assignment.

He was supposed to go with his squadron of Lightnings to escort a group of American Marauders on a different mission, but engine trouble delayed his takeoff and in the hazy sky he couldn't find the other fighters.

He knew the approximate course, however, and struck out over a layer of clouds toward Italy. Halfway there and still alone, he was about to turn back when he encountered a big formation of B-17s flying on a bombing mission to Foggia without a fighter escort.

Waggling his wings to identify himself, he took over a protective position and tagged along. Over the island of Capri, Hanton noticed heavy antiaircraft fire bursting underneath the formation, and then he spotted an ME-109 diving out of the blue.

Hanton dropped his auxiliary "belly tank" and started fighting. His guns cut across the Messerschmitt's left wing. The German fell off with a lurch and dived straight down.

After the bombing of Foggia was completed, Hanton hovered over the Fortresses all the way back to Africa. As they approached their home bases he skipped over to his own field to explain where he had been most of the day.

The Gallup Poll

Australia, Canada and U. S. Now Favor Compulsory Peacetime Military Training

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 23.—In the United States, in Canada, and now in Australia, public opinion has spoken in favor of making all young men go through a period of military training before taking up their civilian jobs in the postwar years.

Cabled results from the Australian Institute of Public Opinion, with which is affiliated the British, United States, Canadian and Swedish polls, show that in the antipodes, support of such compulsory training is even stronger than in Canada or the United States.

Here was the question put to representative voters in all three democracies by public opinion survey organizations:

After the war is over, do you think every able-bodied young man should be required to serve one year in the Army, Navy, or Air Force?

The results follow:

	Yes	No	Undecided
Australia	79%	7%	14%
Canada	56	34	10
United States	66	27	7

The higher vote in Australia for postwar military preparedness is undoubtedly accounted for by the imminence of actual invasion of Australia by the Japanese not so many months ago.

Australians face a wartime labor situation in their coal mines similar to that in the United States. Serious stoppages in the Australian mines have tied up production of coal for months on end.

The Australian Institute has found that a majority of the population would attack this problem in a manner similar to the policy adopted in the United States—government operation of the mines. But, while favoring this drastic step in wartime, the Australian people do not, speaking for the majority, want government operation of the coal mines after the war. This point of view was ascertained by a series of polls, one of which was based on this question:

During the war, should the coal mines be operated by the government, or should the owners be left in charge?

Operated by government	62%
Owners in charge	24
Undecided	14

A second question was this:

After the war, should the coal mines be operated by the government, or should the owners be left in charge?

To this one, support swung to private ownership and operation:

Operated by government	37%
Owners in charge	46
Undecided	17

A survey by the Swedish Institute of Public Opinion reveals that nearly half of the people of Sweden have relatives in the United States. The precise number is 46 per cent, the survey shows, which means that of the 6,406,477 people of Sweden, nearly three million have kinsmen in America.

The majority of the relationships are close blood connections. First of kin, such as brothers or sisters, total 11 per cent; second of kin, such as cousins, 27 per cent; while more distant kin account for only 8 per cent.

Americans born in Sweden or of Swedish extraction have not forgotten their relatives in the old country, for the survey shows that more than half of the families in Sweden who have a relative here have received letters, cables and gift packages from America, mostly since the outbreak of the war. In fact, gift packages have been sent from America to 127,000 addresses in Sweden since the war began.

G.O.P. Chiefs to Meet Sept. 6, 7 To Draw Up Postwar Plank

By D. Harold Oliver
Associated Press Staff Writer

Republican Party leaders announced yesterday they will meet September 6 and 7 at Mackinac Island, Mich., to lay the foundation for what may turn out to be the nucleus of a party platform for 1944.

It will be the first meeting of the full Republican Postwar Advisory Council of 49, composed of Governors, legislators and National Committee members, which National Chairman Harrison E. Spangler organized last May to consider a program of after-the-war foreign relations and domestic policies for submission to the party's National Convention next year.

"Personally," Spangler said yesterday, "I have no doubt that these leaders of the Republican Party will present to the Nation a program for international cooperation that will be a beacon of future peace to all the peoples of the globe."

The party chairman also provided an advance insight into the prime subjects that will be dealt with in the G. O. P. platform next year. He said research material is being gathered to be turned over to subcommittees which the Mackinac meeting will appoint to consider:

1. International relations.
2. Taxation.
3. Reconversion of industry to peacetime production.
4. Orderly demobilization of the armed forces.
5. The organization and streamlining of Government departments and bureaus.

Spangler said the Mackinac meeting would be the first of a series and that the Labor Day date had been selected to permit Senate and House members of the council to attend on their way back for the reconvening of Congress September 14.

Harry F. Kelly, Republican Governor of Michigan and a believer in postwar collaboration with other nations to maintain peace, will be host to the meeting. Spangler said Kelly invited the council to meet on the island "where the members can get in two days of uninterrupted shirt-sleeve work."

Recommendations of the council will be turned over to the 1944 National Convention's resolutions committee.

New Record Made In Texas-Carolina Hop of Two Gliders

A distance record for plane-towed freight gliders, 1234 miles nonstop from Sheppard Field, Texas, to Maxton Army Air Base, N. C., was set in a flight last Sunday, the Army announced yesterday.

The previous record of 1177 miles nonstop was made in the course of a 3500-mile trip of a fully-loaded towed glider from Montreal to Great Britain, announced in London, July 5.

In the flight last Suday, two large gliders, loaded to capacity with special maintenance equipment, were towed by two planes.

"The flight, which was performed in 9 hours and 45 minutes under adverse weather conditions, may have far-reaching implications in solving maintenance problems for Army Air Forces fighter and bombardment units in theaters of operations," the Army said.

Delay Possible In Selection Of New Bishop

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Whether the special session of the Washington Diocesan Convention, July 29 will elect a new Bishop of Washington to succeed the late Bishop James E. Freeman still is a moot question.

In the first place, some ecclesiastical authorities of the Diocese feel that election of a bishop should be postponed until after the general convention of the church in Cleveland the first week in October.

Those favoring delaying the election until the general convention feel that some action may be taken at the convention regarding a new presiding bishop, as the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker's six-year term expires in October.

Since the Presiding Bishop's Seat is now at the Washington Cathedral, sentiment exists among some Episcopalians for making the Presiding Bishop and Bishop of Washington serve a dual position.

There also is a possibility that the Cleveland Convention may decide to free the Presiding Bishop from a diocesan bishop's administrative duties, as in the case of Bishop Tucker, also Bishop of Virginia.

If this is done, it would not change the necessity of the Washington Diocese selecting its own bishop. The Capital then would have two bishops—one the presiding bishop of the church, and the other, bishop of Washington, the latter covering the District and several Maryland counties.

Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan, who was rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish, for many years, is chairman of the Diocesan Standing Committee, the diocesan ecclesiastical authority since Bishop Freeman's death. That committee has called the July 29 meeting.

Leslie Mansell will lead the big crowds in an enjoyable sing of the old gospel hymns. Giles Roberts will be at the piano. W. C. Seymour will direct a 12-piece orchestra.

"TAKE MY LIFE AND LET IT BE"
FRANCES R. HAVERGAL

Take my life, and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to thee.
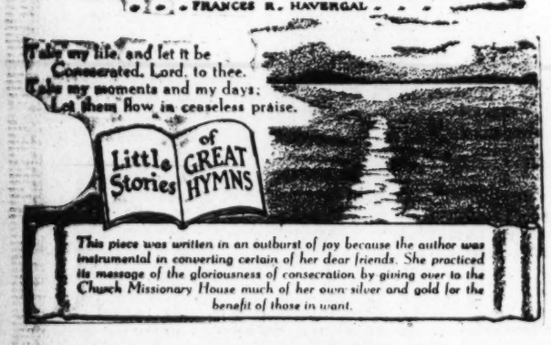
Take my moments and my days;
Let them flow in ceaseless praise.



This piece was written in an outburst of joy because the author was instrumental in converting certain of her dear friends. She practiced its message of the gloriousness of consecration by giving over to the Church Missionary House much of her own silver and gold for the benefit of those in want.

In discuisng the plans for the service, Doctor Sheerin said yesterday.

"Although St. James was one of the inner group of three who were Our Lord's particular friends, he is probably less known than the other two of this group—Peter and John. Since, however, he was one of the chosen of Our Lord, it seems most fitting that what emphasis we can find in Christianity connected with him should be given a great deal of attention. My two sermons on Sunday are endeavors to bring out this particular contribution to Christian thought."

Suburban Steeple

The cornerstone for Bethel Evangelical and Reformed Church, Arlington, Va., will be laid tomorrow at 3 p. m. at 4347 Lee Boulevard. Building of the new structure is expected to be completed in October, just two years from the date of the organization of a mission in that section by the board of national missions of the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

Major address tomorrow will be delivered by the Rev. W. H. Kochheim, pastor of St. John's Church, Baltimore, Md., and a member of Potomac Synod's committee on national missions.

Relics will be deposited in the stone by Dr. Lee A. Peeler, who with Mrs. Lee Peeler came from Staunton, Va., two years ago to establish the Arlington mission.

Other Ministers to Take Part

Formal laying of the stone will be done by the Rev. Charles Inders, pastor of Concordia Church in Washington and recording secretary of the board of national missions. He will be assisted by Peter H. Petersen, architect; Glenn Gordon, member of the synod's committee; E. E. Lyon, builder, and W. N. Hall, mason.

Other ministers who will participate in the service are the Rev. F. Nelson Schlegel, pastor of First Church, and the Rev. Calvin Wingert, pastor of Grace Church, both of Washington, and Frank Fesperman and S. A. Troxell.

The Rev. J. B. Frantz, pastor of St. Paul's Church, Baltimore, Md., will direct congregational singing. The Rev. Manfred Manrodt, pastor of Frieden's Church, Baltimore, Md., and chairman of Potomac Synod's committee, have general charge of the ceremony.

Upon organization, the congregation for the new church abandoned the name of Bethel and met in the Kate Waller Barrett School, 4400 North Henderson Road. The new church, now in process of construction, will cost $25,000.

Church Women in Conference

Women of Central Presbyterian and Church of the Pilgrims in Washington will join other church women of the Synod of Virginia for the annual training school at Massanetta Springs, Va., Monday through August 1.

Church Seen Facing Grave Challenge

The Christian Church faces the greatest challenge it has ever confronted in all history, Dr. George L. Morelock, secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities of the Methodist Church, warned this week in Chicago.

"The world of tomorrow will not, cannot be the same politically, socially, economically, racially or religiously that it was before the war," he warned, and called on Christian laymen to prepare to help establish the new world order or see their religion crumble and die.

Dr. Morelock, in his annual report to the general board, declared:

"Great inertia and false interpretations must be met in our own land. People will be tired of taxes, priorities and rationing, and resentful of the powers that be, and consequently in such a mood that anything may happen. There is the possibility that a blind, resentful minority in Congress may defeat the will of the country for some form of world cooperation that will have for its object the prevention of conflicts in the future.

Nats Bow to Tigers, 12 to 6, Drop to Third

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The memory that Charley Paddock leaves is quickly awakened at the news that he crashed to a hero's death in a flaming Marine Corps plane in Alaska. That memory conjures Paddock's famous "flying finish," that last lunge toward the tape that carried him nearly 18 feet through the air in his winning races.

POVICH

Until Paddock came along to be tagged picturesquely as the world's fastest human by an inspired sports writer, no other dash man had ever attempted such a tremendous lunge at the tape. Pictures of the Paddock finish never needed any caption. Who it was, was unmistakable. Sports page readers had photographs of the stocky, blond Paddock and his fighting face in his famous finish flung at them so often that they knew it quickly as the fastest human again.

But here's the strangest twist to that famous finish. Paddock actually was handicapping himself with that last long lunge. He knew it and privately admitted it. "It made me famous so I continued to use it," he said. "It was great stuff for the pictures, but it didn't get me to the tape as fast as if I had kept running with my feet on the ground."

When he set the 100-yard dash record at 9.5 seconds in 1921, Paddock justified all the Pacific Coast sports writers who built him up as the fastest human. He was that, indisputably. His 9.5 mark was no flash in the pan. He ran the distance in that figure consistently before he retired with his victory in the Olympics. He retired from track for all time, then, desiring to quit as a champion when he did hang up his spikes.

A little known fact is that Paddock was a World War Veteran before he became the world's fastest human. At 17, he enlisted in the first war and was sent overseas, attached to General Pershing's staff. As a second lieutenant in the field artillery, he was one of the United States' youngest commissioned officers.

Paddock was track's contribution to the golden twenties of sports. He was a figure on a level with Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Bill Tilden and Bobby Jones in the fabulous twenties. The success of every track meet he entered was assured. Until Paavo Nurmi came along, Paddock was the greatest drawing card in track history. In all of his actions he was a bundle of nervous energy. Everything he did, he did quickly. As one of his biographers punningly put it, "when Paddock slept, he was fast asleep."

That six-game lead the Yanks are holding in the American League pennant race is actually larger than it sounds, and in the baseball betting the Yanks are now 3-to-5 favorites to take the flag.

The odds are shorter than an ordinary six-game lead would call for, because in the important "games lost" column, the Yankees are actually nine games ahead of the second place club, as of last night. Games lost can never be retrieved. But games unplayed may be won, and the Yankees have that advantage, too, having played fewer.

Yankee pitching has been the chief factor in their retention of the league lead. Pitching has been variously rated as between 60 and 85 per cent of a team's strength and as far as the Yankees are concerned, it merits the maximum figure. Joe McCarthy has more of a choice of pitchers than any other manager in the league. Otherwise, the Yankees aren't too hot.

Beyond the Tigers and the Nats there appears to be nothing in the league with even a ghost of a chance to catch the Yankees, and if Washington and Detroit are still rated contenders their chances would seem to be on the ghostly side, too.

The Nats are still in the grip of a season-long hitting slump, and the Tigers are bothered with a lack of depth in their pitching department. Of the two teams, the Tigers' power would seem to recommend them as having the best chance to overhaul the Yanks. There isn't a club that can match the one-two-three concentration of power the Tigers boast in Dick Wakefield hitting third, Pinky Higgins, fourth, and Rudy York, sixth.

Chicago, with the Tigers' power, would probably be a shoo-in. The White Sox have pitching, but little else. The Yankees are the only club without serious troubles. Like the others, they aren't hitting much, either, but their pitching offsets the lack of a multitude of base hits.

Hagg May Be Forced to Beat American Mile to Best Dodds

Boston Divinity Student to Be Running On Home Grounds and May Be in Top Shape

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., July 23.—With both Gunder (the Wonder) Hagg and Boston's Gil Dodds determined to give the best performances in their transcontinental racing series for the benefit of the American Air Forces Aid Society, there appears to be a slight possibility that the Swedish sensation will be forced to break the American mile record of 4:06.7 to win tomorrow night at the Harvard Stadium.

When Hagg arrived in this country about six weeks ago, he numbered a mile mark of 4:04.6 among his seven world records. Since then, however, Arne Anderson, his countryman, has lowered it to 4:02.6.

Hagg, who admits that he runs only fast enough to win, may be forced to get under Glenn Cunningham's 4:06.7, which stood as a world mark back in 1934, if Dodds has rounded into top condition. Since he lacks the necessary finishing spurt, that Boston divinity student appears pegged as a 4:08 miler.

Three others are down to start against the Swedish star and his pursuer of the past three weeks in Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Starting from scratch with them will be Don Burnham, Dartmouth's intercollegiate mile champion. The American-Scandinavian A. A., which is sponsoring this benefit meet, had hopes of persuading Bill Hulse, New York University's 800-meters champion, and Bobby Knowles, Springfield freshman flash, to accept 40 and 60 yards handicaps.

Cubs Swamp Braves, 5-0

By International News Service

Chicago, July 23.—The Chicago Cubs celebrated Manager Jimmy Wilson's forty-third birthday today by whitwashing the Boston Braves, 5 to 0.

Claude Passeau, hurling his tenth victory of the season, allowed the Braves but four hits, while Jim Tobin was charged with his tenth loss.

The Cubs' big inning was the fourth when they scored three runs on as many hits, but Stan Hack counted what proved to be enough to win in the first when he walked, advanced on a single, and scored on Billy Nicholson's fly.

Morey Beats Donohue in 1-Up Thriller

Goggin and Wehrle Tied at 140 Total In Open Section; Berg Tops Women

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 23.—Upholding golf's amateur ranks, Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., punched a par-breaking 68 today to tie Pro Willie Goggin of White Plains, N. Y., at 140 for the 36-hole lead in Tam O'Shanter's $10,000 All-American Open.

Bob Cochran of St. Louis and Dale Morey of Martinsville, Ind., advanced to tomorrow's scheduled 36-hole final of the All-American Amateur meet with 1-up victories over Frank Kovack of Chicago and John Donohue, Georgetown Universtiy, respectively. But Cochran won his match on the twenty-fifth hole, carding par 4 while Kovack took a 5 after catching the rough on his tee shot and again on his second.

Morey, Indiana State champion and No. 1 player for Louisiana State University, trailed 1 down at the 27-hole marker and went 2 down after three-putting the twenty-ninth. But he won the next two holes to even the match as Donohue took bogies. Morey moved 1 up on the thirty-third, planting a second shot an inch from the cup for a birdie. Donohue evened the match on the short thirty-fourth with a regulation 3 as Morey missed the green with his drive and bogied. But Morey dropped a 12-foot putt on the thirty-fifth for a birdie win to regain the lead and halved the last hole in par.

Patty Berg Leads

Patty Berg of Minneapolis took a four-stroke lead in the $600 Women's Open by authoring a 36-36—72 which established a course record for women. Patty had four birdies and matched par on the other 14 holes to shoot the lowest round in her 18-month comeback campaign. Women's par is 37-39—76.

SPAR Betty Hicks of Long Beach, Calif., had a respectable 74 for a 36-hole aggregate of 153, while Kay Byrne of Rye, N. Y., took an 83 for a total of 162.

Wehrle, eliminated from the All-American Amateur Tournament yesterday, required only 33 putts in shaving two strokes from par on both nines with a pair of 34's. He was stroking for birdies on 13 holes from distances of 10 feet and less.

The 37-year-old Goggin, who always has grabbed his share of cash in the money circuit although never winning a major tournament, shot a 70 to match his front-running score of yesterday. Two birdies and seven pars gave him a front nine of 34, but on the back side he had to scramble for a regulation 36 by counter-balancing two bogeys with a pair of birdies, one of which was made on an 18-foot putt.

Registers 71

Another first round leader, Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., dropped only a stroke off the pace, registering a 71 to be grouped in the 141 bracket. With him were Buck White of Greenwood, Miss., who fashioned a 69 today with five one-putt greens, and young Chick Harbert of Battle Creek, Mich., who threaded a 25-foot putt on the last green for his 69.

A pair of 70 shooters, Felix Serafin of Pittston, Pa., and Bill Kaiser of Louisville, placed at 142.

The 143 bracket was packed with six competitors—Bob Cochran of St. Louis, the second leading amateur; Leland Gibson of Kansas City, Mo.; Sergt. Clayton Haefner of Spartanburg, S. C.; Ralph Hutchison of Bethlehem, Pa.; Andy Gibson, the wee Scott from Baltimore, and veteran Jug McSpaden of Marion, Pa. Hutchison made the grade by shooting a 68, seven strokes under his first-round score.

Gib Sellers of Hot Springs, Ark., Jim Ferrier of Chicago, Harry Cooper of Minneapolis, and the two-time Tam champion, Byron Nelson of Toledo, placed in the 144 list. Nelson matched par 72 for the second straight day.

Among the nine players jammed at 145 were Terl Johnson of Norristown, Pa., one of the trio of first-round leaders; Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C.; Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles, Jimmy Demaret of

He Seems to Know What the Ump's Decision Will Be

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Cardinal Outfielder Harry Walker probably wasn't thumbing his nose at the umpire who called him out as he was tagged at the plate by Giant Catcher Ernie Lombardi, but his stance looks sorta that way. Walker had attempted to score from third on a fly by George Kurowski in the third inning of the game between New York and the Cards. The latter won 1-0. Umpire Larry Getz called the play.

Cards Stretch Streak, Beat Giants, 1 to 0

St. Louis, July 23 (AP).—The Cardinals stretched their winning streak to five in a row and held onto their five-and-one-half-game National League lead today, squeaking through with a 1-to-0 victory over the New York Giants.

Harry Gumbert and Howie Krist combined on a five-hit whitewash job to take the verdict over Ken Chase, and Ace Adams, who served up a six-hitter between them. Gumbert took credit for the victory, his eighth of the year against four setbacks, although he had to retire in the seventh because of a sore arm.

Lone Tally in Second

The lone tally came in the second inning and was brought home by Frank Demaree. He singled with one away, went to third on Ray Sanders' hit to right center and cake-walked across on Georgie Fallon's long fly to left. In the third, the Cards twice got runners as far as third, but they were stranded, and for the rest of the way only one man got as far as second.

Red Sox Split With Chicago, 8-7 and 5-1

By International News Service

Boston, July 23.—The Red Sox overcame a 6-run lead to beat the Chicago White Sox, 8 to 7, in a ten-inning opener of a double-header today, but the Chisox came back to grab the nightcap, 5 to 1.

A grand-slam homer by Vince Castino, first big league round-tripper for the young Chicago catcher, fashioned the visitors' margin of victory in the fourth frame of the nightcap, wherein Lee "Buck" Ross blanked the Cronin-men until the ninth. Heber "Dick" Newsome was the victim.

Bobby Doerr, Red Sox second sacker, committed his first error in 60 games, after handling 342 chances flawlessly, when he dropped a pop fly in the eighth inning of the opener. Then, in the last of the inning, he hit his eighth homer to spark a two-run rally which drove Johnny Humphries to cover, and he doubled with two gone in the ninth to set the stage for the Fox round-tripper off Joe Haynes.

Doerr now is credited with major league records of accepting 342 consecutive chances and playing 59 games in a row without a miscue. The previous consecutive chances record of 271 was set by Oscar Melillo for the St. Louis Browns in 1934 and Max Bishop, back in 1926 for the Philadelphia Athletics, established the old errorless game mark by handling 276 chances in 53 games.

Yanks Eke Out 1-0 Victory Over Browns

New York, July 23 (AP).—Hank Borowy and his finger blisters were doing very nicely today and as a result the Yankees were handed a 1-to-0 decision over the St. Louis Browns.

Hank, who has been plagued by blisters all season, finally came up with a day on which they didn't bother him, so he turned in his first complete game since June 6, limiting the Brownies to five hits and fanning eight as he chalked up his fifth win of the year.

In spite of his classy curving, however, his elbowing was matched by Denny Galehouse, who twirled one of the top games of his career—and then had it taken away from him because of an error by one of his mates.

This came in the first play of the second inning, and settled the whole thing in a hurry. Charley Keller led off the frame and Mike Chartak made a two-base muff of his liner. Then Bill Dickey followed with a double to center—and school was out.

Dodgers Win; Wyatt Shines

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, July 23.—Between the Brooklyn Dodger outfield and the elbowing of Whitey Wyatt, the Reds never had a chance today.

The Dodger fly-chasing trio chalked up 18 putouts to equal the major league record, and Wyatt, making his first mound appearance since June 30, pitched a four-hitter to give the Bums a 2-to-0 victory over the Rhinelanders and hand Johnny Vander Meer his eleventh defeat. Vander Meer gave up only five hits.

Davis Top Threat In Parks Net Meet

Robert Davis, the dark horse of the Public Parks tourney, established himself as the man to beat by eliminating the defending champion Eddie Miller, in straight sets yesterday on the East Potomac Park courts, 6—1, 6—4, to reach the final round.

Sergt. Nathan Askin, in a quarterfinal match defeated Robert Miller, 6—0, 6—3. Askin meets Ensign R. L. Hill at 2 p. m. today. The winner of this match plays Davis for the title at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Eddie and Robert Miller meet William McClure and W. E. Fausold in a doubles semifinal at 6:30 o'clock. The winners of this match play in the final for the doubles title against Sergeant Askin and Lee Wood at the conclusion of the singles match Sunday afternoon.

Federick Golfers Making Pinball Machine of Links

Frederick, Md., July 23 (AP).—Members of the Catoctin Country Club are playing golf under difficulties these days. Short of help, cows are being used to keep the grass trimmed in the club's fairways.

To keep the bovines off the greens, electrically charged wires have been stretched around the putting surfaces.

So the players, after being confronted by the "walking hazards" on the fairways, have to climb under or over the wires to get onto the greens.

Tribe Beats Macks, 1 to 0; Beards Grow

Philadelphia, July 23 (AP).—The Cleveland Indains', winning streak, the Athletics' string of defeats and Lou Boudreau's whiskers all grew longer today, thanks to a home run by Ray Mack.

The four-base drive, one of six hits allowed by Don Black, gave the Tribe a 1-0 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics for their fifth straight and a sweep of the three-game series here.

It added another day's growth to the beards of Boudreau and his coaches, Del Baker, Burt Shotton and George Susce, who have sworn off shaving until Cleveland loses—something that hasn't happened since last Saturday. The defeat was the eighth in a row for the Athletics.

Mel Harder, idle since May 8 because of a fractured ankle, held the A's to four hits in handing them their eighth successive defeat. No Philadelphian reached third base and only one got to second.

Arlington Classic Looms as Wide Open Race for Field of 9

Some Prefer Askmenow as Standout Bet

But Occupation And Chop Chop Are Equally Well Received by Others

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 23.—Nine horses are expected to start in the $50,000 Added Arlington Classic tomorrow—an event that seems as wide open as the Grand Canyon.

Unlike many former years, there wasn't an outstanding favorite in the field on the eve of the fifteenth running of one of the Nation's richest races.

If all get away, the classic at Washington Park will have a gross value of $72,750.

The absence of any entry deemed likely to win in a romp has created quite a stir among the professional and amateur handicappers.

Some of them like the Mill River Stable's Chop Chop, winner of the Empire City Handicap. Others figure Hal Price Headley's Askmenow, carrying only 115 pounds, has an excellent chance. She is the only filly in the contest, and no filly has ever earned the classic purse.

Considerable speculation centered on Occupation and his ability to maintain high speed over the mile and a quarter route. He was defeated by Askmenow in the mile and an eighth Challenger Purse last Monday, but his adherents are legion and loyal anyway.

The other contenders are Bourmont, Slide Rule, Amber Light, Famous Victory, All Hoss and Burnt Cork.

One thing seemed certain. The result, whatever it may be, can hardly be classified as an upset.

Field of Nine Entered In Yonkers Handicap

New York, July 23 (AP).—A field of nine, headed by William Woodward's two-horse entry of Apache and Trierarch, was named today to start in tomorrow's $10,000 added Yonkers Handicap, closing day feature of the Empire City Association meeting at the Jamaica track.

Apache, who won the 6-furlong Fleetwing over the same track last Saturday after running second to Louis B. Mayer's Thumbs Up in the rich Butler Handicap the week before, likely will go to the post as favorite in the mile and one-sixteenth test, although he will carry top weight of 128 pounds and is better known as a sprinter. Apache won the event last year under 115 pounds, setting an Empire City track record.

George Case to Show Speed At War Relief Benefit Game

Moses and Johnson, Sox Outfielders, Only Competition

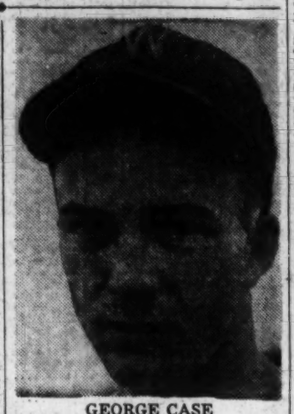
George Case, fastest man in baseball, will race against Nat and White Sox outfielders at 60 yards for a $50 War Bond as a feature of the War Relief benefit baseball game show at Griffith Stadium next Wednesday night, it was announced yesterday.

Case, the American League's leading base stealer for some years, is expected to get his strongest competition from Wally Moses of the White Sox, who is now second to the Nat speed boy in stolen bases. Big Bob Johnson also is expected to make a strong showing in these straight-away speed tests.

This will give fans an opportunity to see Case at his running best, for the New Jersey lad will get an opportunity to unleash his terrific speed on the straight-away and will not be forced to slow down on the turns, as he naturally must do in running the bases.

The outfielder sprint is to be one of three similar races, according to the plans announced by Lieut. Comdr. Max Farrington, in charge of this portion of the War Relief Benefit Game program, which is sponsored by the Touchdown Club. Outfielders and battery men will also race, with a $50 war bond going to the winner in each group.

Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission and president of the Touchdown Club, and Ralph D. Pittman, former club prexy and member of its executive committee, will act as honorary judges.



GEORGE CASE

The races will follow the American Legion pageant in the program and will immediately precede the ball game between the Nats and the White Sox. The pageant featuring the worlds largest American flag, will get under way at 8 p. m.

Tickets for the game are on sale at the ball park and at the Touchdown Club. All seats are reserved. All receipts will be turned over to the National War Fund, Inc., to be distributed among various war relief agencies.

McClelland North End Show Judge

Lieut. Col. Charles B. McClelland, former Fort Myer (Va.) Horse Show team star, will make his first public appearance in the Washington area in two years tomorrow at the North End Horse Show—but in a slightly different capacity, that of judge in open jumper classes.

Colonel McClelland, once owner-rider of the consistent gelding, Smacko, won jumper titles from Madison Square Garden to Warrenton, Va., and was a favorite with local followers of the sport, many of whom considered him one of the Army's topnotch riders.

Sent from Fort Myer to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., after the Third Cavalry was disbanded, Colonel McClelland commanded an outfit of tank destroyers in Texas before coming to his present post at Fort Meade, Md. He sold Smacko before he left Fort Myer to Capt. and Mrs. Alvin Kay, under whose colors the big leaper will appear tomorrow.

Sharing the judging assignment will be Claude W. Owen, local hunting and showing enthusiast, who will officiate in the hunter events.

Classes for the show, which will begin at 2 p. m. on the North End hilltop near Silver Spring, Md., are for hacks that have never won a blue ribbon in a walk-trot-canter class; warm-up jumpers, open hacks, green hunters, open jumpers, working hunters, modified Olympia, hunter hacks and two championships.

Detroit, and Orville White of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Al Huske of Elgin, Ill., also made this bracket, firing a 33, 33—66—the best round of the tournament thus far and one which gave him $100. It was only a stroke shy of equaling the course record, held jointly by Nelson and Leonard Dodson of Kansas City.

The open field was cut to 85 contestants. Most of the top-ranking stars made the grade, but two notable exceptions were Ralph Guldahl of San Diego, Calif., and Bobby Cruikshank of Richmond, Va. Guldahl, two-time Open champion, had rounds of 79, 75 for an aggregate of 154, while Cruikshank, leading pro money winner of 1943 after his victory in the North-South Open and also a two-time Open titleholder, faltered with 79, 82—161.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Wallace to Make Fightingest Speech Tomorrow

THOSE who have peeked at Vice President Wallace's address to be delivered in Detroit Sunday, say that it is the fightingest, toughest speech of his career. That is saying a lot, since he has delivered a couple of others which made Republicans indulge in name-calling and which were read with avid interest all over the world.

Inside fact is that Wallace was planning a fighting speech even before his public row with Jesse Jones and his rebuff from the President. The Vice President plans his speeches a long time in advance, sometimes spends weeks preparing them, writes them almost exclusively himself.

So, any acid statements in the Detroit speech will not be the result of the Jones row. Basically they will result from the fact that the Vice President has decided to take up the old liberal mantle where Roosevelt dropped it with the war.

The President has given complete approval to Wallace picking up the mantle. He read every word of the Detroit speech and even put in some punch lines.

However, whether the President approved or not, the bets of those who know Wallace are 100 to 1 that he will continue the liberal fight. Basically shy, not given to easy expression, Wallace doesn't rouse easily. But when he does get started he doesn't stop. He nows feels that the old economic-social issues which Roosevelt faced during the bank holiday period of 1933 are back again, and that someone has to carry the ball.

Cox Tops 'Em

Congressman Eugene Cox of Georgia has now set the all-time high for helping himself and family at the expense of American taxpayers. Other Congressmen from time to time have put their relatives on the Government payroll, but none has ever come anywhere near Cox's record for getting so many feet in the feedbox.

At present he has six relatives on the payroll, for an annual total of $30,120, including his own congressional salary.

In addition he has now secured from Congress a handout o fthe taxpayer's money to the tune of $60,000 to investigate the Federal Communications Commission after that commission unearthed a check for $2,500 allegedly received by Cox for lobbying.

It is a criminal offense for a Congressman to lobby with a Government bureau, so the FCC referred the matter to the Justice Department. Whereupon Cox persuaded his brethren on Capitol Hill to investigate his FCC accusers and make him "impartial" chairman of the probe.

Here is the detailed breakdown of Cox's nepotism:

ROSA ROBINSON, Cox's secretary, is his sister—$3380 a year.

J. CHANEY ROBINSON, her husband and Cox's brother-in-law, is assistant House bill clerk —3120 a year.

GRACE COX, wife of the Congressman, is a clerk in his office —$3120 a year.

ROBIN COX, SR., a brother, postmaster at Donalsonville—$2400.

MRS. JIM COX HOGGARD, a sister, postmistress at Camilla (Cox's home town)—$2550.

CHARLES M. COX, a nephew, senior administrative officer of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's special program division, who says he got his job without Cox's aid—$5600 a year.

CONGRESSMAN COX'S YEARLY SALARY—$10,000.

Under Two Flags

The chickens hatched when American ships were put under the Panamanian flag to avoid neutrality laws are now coming home to roost.

As a result, the United States Government now emp' ys 16,000 seamen whom it pays in hard cash every month, but over whom it has no disciplinary control whatsoever. The seamen are working under the Panamanian flag, though actually they are American citizens. So when they get into brawls in American ports they must answer to the Panamanian Consul, though they are American citizens and draw American pay.

Certain State Department officials are urging that the problem be solved by transferring the ships back to United States registry.

NOTE: At present, when one of these ships clears a United States port it must pay a $20 fee to the Consul of Panama, in spite of the fact that the ship belongs to the U. S. A.

Axis Distortions

THE AXIS radio is trying to scare up a war in South America. The Bolivian army, with Peru's support, according to the Axis, is about to launch an attack on Chile to gain a port on the Pacific.

Here is the only grain of truth behind this propaganda: When Bolivian President Penaranda returned to La Paz from his visit to the United States, he stated publicly that Bolivian aspirations for a seaport had never been abandoned, that when the opportune time arose Bolivia would assert that claim.

Truth is, however, that Penaranda had no such militant motive in mind. Furthermore, moderate elements in Chile assert they would be perfectly willing to discuss the sale of the port of Arica to Boliva.

If the Chilean Moderates actually bring about negotiation for the sale of Arica, they will set a new high in good neighbor relations. It has not been long since the territorial ambitions of South American countries—as in the case of Peru versus Ecuador and Bolivia versus Paraguay—have been settled by a resort to arms.

Merry-Go-Round

UNITED STATES officials visiting Britain are struck by the fact that a British air officer can breakfast with his family, see the children off to school, and in two hours be over the heart of enemy territory on a bombing mission. . . . Politicos are wondering if there is any significance behind the move of astute Frank Gannett, New York State publisher, in opening a Washington news bureau in charge of Cecil Dickson, formerly of the Chicago Sun. . . . Patriotic Representative John Lesinski of Michigan has chalked up a record for his colleagues to shoot at. He is turning all of his congressional salary for 1942 and 1943 into war bonds. . . . Lesinski has private business interests in Detroit, but can't be classed in the heavy income brackets.

Mechanized Cowboys

"Montgomery County Cruiser No. 20, get your rope and gallop up to 9311 Kensington Parkway and lasso a horse that's eating up a man's Victory garden," the police radio blared yesterday. Policemen Charles Cooley and Walter Heflin captured the animal, whose owner promised to pay for the damage.

Cumberland, Md., July 23 (A.P.).—Miss Ruth Williams, Flintstone, 12 miles west of here, joined the WAVES at the local recruiting station here today, to make the fifth member of her family to become part of the United States Navy. Four brothers, Harry, Roy, Basil and Paul Williams were already in the service, Harry leading the family procession into the Navy shortly after Pearl Harbor.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

(Editor's Note: Government employes take over the Federal Diary again today. You are invited to send your views and comments to this column.)

Technically Correct, Says Correspondent

"To me, your answer to Representative Ramspeck's statement on 'callow collegians' is only technically correct. You seemed to have proved beyond any doubt that the greater number of personnel directors throughout Government are older men and women whose college days, if any, are far behind them.

"But whoever sees a personnel director? A personnel director, to the average person in Government, is something of a myth, something you hear about but never see. They stay behind closed doors guarded by messengers, clerks and secretaries. They must spend their time going over stacks of papers, working up involved procedures, and talking about human problems which they know very little about.

"My point is that the personnel directors sit back in their paneled and air-cooled offices and have the minimum of contact with the employes. They don't interview applicants for jobs, listen to employe troubles, reclassify jobs, pass out promotions or do any of the other things that mean better living and happier working conditions for the employes. These vital problems are left to inexperienced and callow individuals to solve. And generally, they make a mess of it. If Mr. Ramspeck meant to say that the personnel offices are doing a lousy job, I surely must agree with him. A. D. K."

"Mr. Ramspeck is 100 per cent right when he says that the Civil Service Commission placed too much emphasis on college degrees. The stenographers in Government know that to be true. I've seen music teachers, shoe clerks, five and dime girls, and nursemaids—all with college degrees—take clerk jobs and within six months to a year they'll all be making more than the college degreeless stenographers.

"Once a stenographer always a stenographer. That's the rule in Government. But if you have a college degree you have a slight chance to get promoted to a better job with more money in the professional or supervisory class. A degreeless girl hasn't a chance to get a better job and her experience is given no credit whatsoever.—A. L. P."

Three More

FEDERAL HEROES: Lieut. Col. Justice M. Chambers left his job as personnel director of the Maritime Commission three years ago to take a commission in the Marines. And when the Marines invaded the Solomons he was one of their leaders. He led a successful attack on Tulagi, though he was badly wounded. After months in a hospital, he's now down at New River, N. C., showing new Marines how to fight . . . Lieut. Jack W. Conway was employed at Farm Security from 1935 until the Army inducted him on March 24, 1941. He left this country in 1942, and he was among the first troops to land on New Caledonia in March of that year. Several months ago he had the distinction of being commissioned direct from the ranks . . .

Lieut. (j. g.) Douglas Sorensen was commissioned an ensign in the Navy after he was graduated from its supply school at Harvard. He has participated in the Navy's squeeze play on the Japs in the Aleutians. He was first stationed at Kodak, then Dutch Harbor, later at Adak Island and now presumably at Attu. He's a graduate of the University of Utah and he was employed in the Civil Service Commission information office.

Send candidates for FEDERAL HEROES to this column. Remember, they must be former Federal employes and they must have served out of the country.

In the July edition of the Secret Service Record is an article by Francis de Sales Ryan, Treasury official, which relates some of the little-known activities of Treasury Secretary Morgenthau. It says in part: "Secretary Morgenthau is a sympathetic man and he has a very human side to his nature. Frequently he has demonstrated deep and genuine concern for the welfare of his employes . . . he established a Federal credit union for the benefit of hundreds of employes in the low salary brackets . . . he set up a welfare organization solely to help employes who needed rehabilitation . . . he improved vastly working conditions.

"During the long and extremely cold and stormy weather that prevailed during January and February in 1935, Secretary Morgenthau directed that bags of coal be sent to the homes of many Treasury employes in the low salary groups, who it was found were unable to buy sufficient coal . . . He once came unexpectedly to the Treasury Building late at night to talk with individual employes of the labor and char force to learn at first hand if they were receiving fair and considerate treatment from their superiors. He has written numerous letters to sick employes."

'7th Column' Drive Ended

The Junior Board of Commerce yesterday wound up its "Smash the Seventh Column" program to prevent accidents with the presentation of skits at local playgrounds and the guiding by School Boy Patrols of pedestrians through shopping-district traffic.

Pentagon Bus Fare Remedy Hope Revived

Senate Unit Counsel Expects Arlington 'No Man's Land' Puzzle to Be Solved

New hope that the Arlington County "no-man's land" of police jurisdiction can be eliminated and equitable bus fares to the Pentagon Building established early this fall was voiced yesterday by Julian C. Sourwine, counsel for the Senate District Committee.

Sourwine revealed that Attorney General Abram P. Staples of Virginia had offered certain amendments to the bill introduced during the last session of Congress by Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee, to clarify jurisdictional questions between Arlington County and the District of Columbia.

No Land Transfer

Staples, Sourwine said, wanted the first section of the bill rephrased to make it perfectly clear that no transfer of territory is involved in the measure. Since McCarran's only aim was to clear up questions of police and bus jurisdiction in and about Federal property in Arlington County, the amendment is not expected to meet any difficulty.

Another amendment sought by Virginia makes sure that no restrictions will be placed around interstate buses run from Virginia. McCarran seeks only to have the Public Utilities Commission here regulate fares between the Pentagon and Navy buildings on the other side of the river.

Liquor Jurisdiction

Virginia also wants jurisdiction over the sale of liquor at the Washington National Airport, Sourwine said.

No difficulty has arisen over the question of police jurisdiction, which has been the most tangled problem to present itself. If McCarran's bill is adopted the Metropolitan Police here will have responsibility for law enforcement in about all Federal property on the other side of the Potomac and along certain sections of Arlington Memorial Highway.

Poisoned Dog Food Cleared of Causing Railey Baby Death

Natural causes and not poisoned dog food caused the death of 16-month-old Stanley Railey, jr., tests by State pathologists have revealed. Results of the tests were communicated to Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner, yesterday.

Dr. Boyd said he would present all material gathered by him in connection with the case to State's Attorney Gwynn Bowie.

The child, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Railey, sr., 1205 Fifty-fourth Avenue, Hillside, Md., died July 12 in the arms of his aunt, Mrs. Mildred Sullivan of Maryland Park, Md., while she was trying to get him to a hospital.

The child was believed to have eaten dog food, given the family by a neighbor, which was believed spoiled.

City News In Brief

Jailed for Fraud Effort

Wallace C. Hickcox, 52, of 2500 Fourteenth Street Northwest, yesterday was sentenced to serve two years in jail in Municipal Court after his conviction on a charge of attempted false pretense which grew out of his attempt to purchase a spray of orchids for a funeral offering and have change for $50 sent with the flowers. Hedge Fowel, florist, of 1509 K Street Northwest, told the court he became suspicious and ascertained there had been no death at the address given. He then called police.

Personal Property Tax

Although lines have formed before the Tax Assessor's Office all week to pay the personal property tax, Assessor Edward Dent warned last night that only 10,000 persons—or about one-fourth the total number expected—have filed their return.

Payment of the personal property tax is due before July 31, and a 20 per cent penalty is imposed on late returns. In order to avoid the usual last minute rush in filing tax returns, Dent urged all District residents to give immediate attention to these paymens.

Sentenced for Robbery

Miss Frances Henson, 28, Negro, of 2006 Claggett Place Northeast, yesterday was sentenced to serve a 6-to-18 month jail term after she pleaded guilty to robbery in "rolling" an Army sergeant of $160 on July 1. The soldier contended he was going out to buy some medicine for food poisoning when he met the defendant.

Stoicism, Tears Mark Adieux As Army Takes 17 D. C. Dogs

PARTING FOR DURATION—Mrs. Lewis Holmes Ulman, 2700 Q Street Northwest, says "farewell for the duration" to Jibs'l, part boxer, part Chesapeake Bay retriever, as he departs for Army training at Front Royal, Va. Jibs'l and 16 other dogs left yesterday

"Sure, I feel pretty bad about Teddy going into the Army—but I bet the Germans will be even sorrier!" declared 12-year-old John Okey as he gave his big dog a farewell pat yesterday before putting him in the "Dogs for Defense" truck bond for Front Royal, Va.

And such were the sentiments of 16 other dog owners bidding occasionally stoic, often teary adieux to their Army-bound pets at Fourteenth and Constitution Avenue Northwest as sympathetic enlisted men loaded boxes on the truck that was to carry them off to "K-9" basic training.

John was positive that Teddy would take readily to Army life, for originally he was the gift of an Army captain at Fort Belvoir. Teddy weighs 70 pounds and is part German shepherd, part Siberian chow.

Jibs'l, Mrs. Lewis Holmes Ulman's contribution to the corps, was sent to the service because his master, formerly a lawyer here, now is Pvt. Ulman and dogs are not permitted at her new residence, 2700 Q street Northwest.

"He's part boxer and part Chesapeake Bay retriever," pretty Mrs. Ulman explained. "One of his full brothers from the same litter already has joined the Army—and we're confident that Jib will make a good soldier."

Not so cheerful was 4-year-old Gwen Greger, 4410 Macomb Street Northwest, who managed to hold back her tears as she exclaimed: "I hope Fibber doesn't pass!" Fibber is a 70-pound Doberman pinscher, already well trained to obey many commands.

Another Doberman recruit was Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gawler's 3-year-old, Duchess, a winner in several dog shows and the particular pride of Joey, 9, and Bobby, 6.

"We're too young to go into the Army so we decided to send Duchess," Joey declared manfully, while his mother wiped away a few tears.

J. E. Goodson, 63 L Street Northwest, wrote a final message to his shepherd, Pudgie, on the top of the big box in which she was shipped: "Go on, little doggie, I'm on behind to get the rest of them. Do a good job." He did not remain to see Pudgie's departure.

If the dogs are found to be unsuitable for further training at Front Royal, they will be returned to their owners. Otherwise they will complete eight weeks of basic training and then go on active duty.

Phone Firm Counsel Hurt By Streetcar

Ralph A. Van Orsdel Suffers Concussion Of Brain and Cuts; Bicycle Victim Dies

D. C. traffic deaths this year . 44
Deaths this date last year ... 59
District total last year 108

Ralph A. Van Orsdel, 59, vice president and general counsel of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was struck by a streetcar shortly after 4 p. m. yesterday at Fifteenth and H Streets Northwest.

VAN ORSDEL

He was taken to Emergency Hospital where preliminary examination disclosed he suffered concussion of the brain and lacerations of the right side of his face and left forehead. At the hospital last night his condition was reported as improving.

According to police, the phone executive, who lives at the Wardman Park Hotel, stepped south off a streetcar loading zone into the path of a westbound trolley. The fully loaded streetcar was traveling slowly, it was said, and stopped before its wheels ran over the victim.

Policeman A. A. Schmidt of the Accident Investigation Unit said the streetcar was operated by George W. Wood, 29, of 654 V Street Southeast, who has had three weeks of experience. He was not held.

Van Orsdel has lived in Washington since 1930, having come here from Newcastle, Pa. He has been a teacher at Lincoln, Nebr., and for 20 years was in private practice in Omaha, Nebr. He has served on the executive committee of the American Bar Association.

Three persons were seriously injured last night when their automobile jumped the curb at First Street and Maryland Avenue Southwest and crashed into the granite base of the Garfield statue.

They were Daniel J. Walsh, 43, of 1156 Abbey Place Northeast; Charles Gentzler, 46, and his wife, both of 30 Franklin Street Northeast. They were removed to Casualty Hospital where their condition was described as serious. Police said the car was driven by Walsh. It was demolished.

Early yesterday morning, Mary Roseman, Negro, 39, of 1801 Swann Street Northwest, died at Emergency Hospital of a fractured skull received Thursday night when struck by a bicycle. She was the forty-fourth District traffic fatality this year.

The woman was crossing Eighteenth Street Northwest near T Street, when she was struck. Alfred Paige, Negro, 14, of 1742 Swann Street Northwest, was riding the bicycle without lights, police reported, and quoted him as saying he did not see the woman.

He was released in custody of his parents to appear at a coroner's inquest, the date of which has not been set.

Thibault, Starlight Singer Tonight, Fought to Gain Poise

Conrad Thibault, baritone radio star who will sing tonight in the seventh of The Post series of Starlight Concerts, recalled after arrival here last night that his experiences as a teen-age choir singer and a floorwalker in a women's apparel store had facilitated his rise to the concert stage.

A genial conversationalist who laughed often as he spoke, Thibault reminisced on how he skidded through his "awkward adolescence" singing in just about every denominational church choir in his home town of Northampton, Mass.—Episcopal, Congregational, Presbyterian and Catholic.

Recommends Choirs

After recommending every boy who aspires to follow a vocal career should join a church choir, he spoke with as much zest of his job as a jazz singer touring New England with "Mississippi Mud," a snappy favorite of a few years back, as his theme song.

"I think my varied experiences helped me gain poise for radio and the concert stage," Thibault, tall dark-heared idol of women music fans throughout the country, said. "For example, when I went to New York to study a few years ago, I had to take a job during the day as a floor walker. I was just another boy from a country town with my feet feeling like immense hams. The girls who sold lingerie in my department loved to make me blush. But I lived through it and have thought often since then that a man who could face that gang could stand up before the largest audience in the country."

Thibault's rise to fame was due partially to encouragement given him by the late President Calvin Coolidge, who heard him singing one night in a Northhampton church. After the service, Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge sought out the young baritone and later aranged for him to compete for a scholarship to the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. He won it and subsequently joined the Philadelphia Grand Opera Company.

"My big chance came one night when the leading baritone of the opera became ill only an hour before he was scheduled to appear," Thibault recalled. "The management sought frantically for a baritone and finally in desperation they took me because I knew the part. From that night on, things came easier for me."

Thibault began singing over a local Philadelphia radio station where he attracted the attention of National Broadcasting Co. talent scouts who took him to New York. He is now star of the N. B. C. "Manhattan Merry Go-Round" and the C. B. S. "American Melody Hour."

Tickets to the concert tonight and tomorrow night, when Thibault will give an entirely different program, may be obtained at the Cappel Concert Bureau, 1340 G Street Northwest, and at the box-office at the park at 55 cents, $1.10 and $1.65. Martha Lipton, contralto, will also be guest artist at both concerts.

OPA Panel Board Penalizes 9 More for Pleasure Driving

Nine alleged pleasure drivers were penalized in the second session this week of the special OPA panel board hearing at the Force School Building, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, last night.

Dr. Edward J. Cummings, 4635 Kenwood Drive Northwest, who said that he had gone to the Army and Navy Country Club July 18 for dinner and 18 holes of golf, drew the stiffest penalty—two A coupons and two week's supply of C coupons.

When informed by John Jackson, acting chairman, of the assessment, Dr. Cummings said:

"I'm going on a vacation next week, anyway—everything will work out all right."

Informed that the pleasure driving fine amounted to 20 gallons of gasoline, Dr. Cummings notified the panel he would appeal the sentence to R. K. Thompson, OPA district director.

Eight others found guilty of violating the pleasure driving ban were assessed coupon forfeitures. Two who failed to show up at the hearing were fined two A coupons each.

Their penalties followed a suggestion by John Laskey, chief OPA enforcement attorney, that penalties be more severe for those who ignored notices to appear.

"It is, of course, understood that the sentences might be set aside or adjusted should they later show good reason for their absence," Laskey explained.

The absentees were Charles A. Rice, 1028 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, and William C. Sparks, 3315 Newark Street Northwest. Cases against James J. Shea, 1900 F Street Northwest, and Hule A. Smith, 4343 Cathedral Avenue, were continued until July 30. Neither was present.

One A coupon each was assessed the following:

Edmond Covington, 1320 South Capitol Street; Henry Gilreath, 1210 Second Street Southwest; Izetta Jewel Miller, 2222 Q Street Northwest; Mrs. Victor Sadd, 1612 Twentieth Street Northwest; Alice M. Dillen, 2126 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, and William C. Sparks, 3315 Newark Street Northwest.

Notice of violation of the nonessential driving ban mailed C. W. Page at 2553 Waterside Place Northwest was returned unclaimed.

All pleasure driving cars turned in by OPA investigators, except those of Edmond Covington and Henry Gilreath, were seen at the Army and Navy County Club testimony showed.

During the absence of Frederick Stohlman, J. Paull Marshall, chief price attorney for the OPA district office, served as a board member.

Elliott Roosevelt, Back in Capital, Had 2 Close Calls

Col. Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, is back in Washington after photographing targets in North Africa and other war theaters in the Mediterranean area, it was learned last night.

Colonel Roosevelt, who was graduated December 21, 1941, from Kelly Field's Air Corps aerial navigators' school, participated in the American offensive of North Africa. While in charge of photographic reconnaissance in Northwest Africa with the United States Eighth Air Force, he was awarded the Air Medal for "meritorious achievement."

Last Tuesday, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, chatting with wounded sailors and marines in the Seattle Naval Hospital, told of two close calls Elliott had experienced. One, she said, was in England, where the tail of his plane dropped off only 15 minutes after he had landed.

"And on the return to Africa," she said, "the wind blew the plane into a transport ship, completely demolishing it, but my son was not injured. More than ever, I say, it's all luck."

Electric Rate Slash Is Appealed

Pepco Acts to Block PUC Order to Cut Yearly Income in District by $350,000

The Potomac Electric Power Co. rate controversy reached a new high in complexity yesterday when the company filed an appeal in District Court to the Public Utilities Commission order which reduced the yearly electric rate by $350,000.

Shortly afterward, the PUC filed its answer to suits brought by the OPA, the Office of Economic Stabilization, the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department and the Public Buildings Administration. PUC upheld its $350,000 yearly decrease and alleged the demand of the Government agencies for a two-million-dollar decrease instead, was entirely unwarranted.

As matters stood last night:

1. The Government agencies contend PUC's $350,000 decrease is in effect inflationary since it allegedly gives the company an excessive profit.
2. The electric company contends since no increase in rates was ever contemplated, the OPA and the OES are not legally empowered to take any action. They contend other agencies haven't shown any cause on which the court should take action.
3. The electric company wants the same rate computation as used last year and feel any reduction will deprive it of a fair profit.
4. PUC contends when the Government agencies entered the hearings before PUC, they tried to sidetrack the issue by attacking the sliding-scale arrangement under which rates were contemplated. This, they say, was out of order since courts have decreed the sliding scale is valid.
5. The Federation of Citizens Associations and various individuals are petitioning the court to allow them to enter the case as parties materially affected by any action the courts must take. The associations state they wish to maintain the sliding scale agreement but would not resist a decrease on that basis.

Va. Farmers To Need 2000 Workers Soon

More than 2000 workers over a period of two months will be needed in the tomato, peach and apple producing sections of Virginia, beginning August 10, it was announced yesterday by K. Vernon Banta, director of the United States Employment Service office in Washington.

At a conference between Banta and S. M. Cox, district representative of the Virginia State extension service held at Fairfax, it was agreed that the USES office in Washington would begin recruiting Monday among prospective vacationists who are Federal employes.

John Jones, recruiting officer of the USES office here, will be in charge.

County Agents Confer

Most of the tomato and peach harvesting will be around Harrisonburg and New Market, Banta said.

Twelve county agents were present at the conference. About 500 workers will be needed initially, Banta said.

Although the apple harvest will come considerably later, the peach and tomato crop will ripen concurrently, thus making it necessary to have workers recruited immediately.

"With the turnover which is expected to be rather high due to war shortened vacations, we are arranging for the farmers and orchardists to call in trucks for workers in Washington," Banta said. "However," he continued, "many of the farms will be easily reached by bus."

Many Workers Needed

Men, women and youths will all be used in this year's harvest.

Federal employes who are interested in harvest work during their vacation period may "sign up" in their respective departments by contacting their personnel bureaus, where proper forms to fill out will be found, Banta explained.

Meanwhile there is a current need for 20 married couples to work on farms in Fairfax County, Banta said. Houses will be furnished and salaries will range from $65 to $75 monthly.

"In many cases milk will be furnished, and in some instances where the farms are isolated meat also is furnished," Banta said.

Workers, however, will be required to supply their own household furniture.

Particulars will be supplied those interested by the USES office at Fifth and K Streets here.

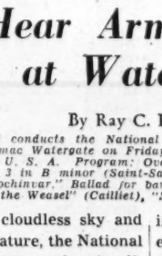
6000 Hear Army Privates, Soloists at Watergate Concert

By Ray C. B. Brown

Charles O'Connell conducts the National Symphony in the seventeenth summer concert at the Potomac Watergate on Friday night. Soloists: Privates Erno Valasek and Glenn Darwin, U. S. A. Program: Overture to "Die Meistersinger" (Wagner), Violin Concerto No. 3 in B minor (Saint-Saens), "Two Hebraic Poems" (McDonald), "Stars" (Howe), "Lochinvar" Ballad for baritone and orchestra (Chadwick), Variations on "Pop Goes the Weasel" (Caillet), "Salute to Our Armed Forces" (Bodge).

Favored by a cloudless sky and moderate temperature, the National Smyphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles O'Connell gave its seventeenth summer concert last evening at the Potomac Watergate for an audience of approximately 6000. In honor of the two soloists, Pvts. Erno Valasek and Glenn Darwin, the concert was dedicated to the United States Army Air Forces in which they are both serving at Bolling Field, and the occasion called forth a large number of men in uniform. While the program was not entirely native in character, the conductor saw to it that the second part was devoted exclusively to music by American composers.



BROWN

Erno Valasek performed brilliantly in the third violin concerto by Saint-Saens, a work which has not been heard here in its full [illegible] so long that it sounded fresh and stimulating. Saint-Saens had a great talent that fell short of genius only because it lacked spiritual depths; he always had interesting things to say and he expressed them with cogency, yet he was more of a wit than a philosopher. His sense of poetry guided him in the writing of graceful melodies and he had a knack for the sentimental phrase, but the listener is never quite sure of his sincerity.

The soloist showed technical skill in the concerto which was deliberately made fiery and scintillant for the masterly fingers of Pablo Sarasate, and his performance had many excellencies in execution. His tone in the lyrical passages had warmth and richness, and he played them with persuasive accents. The reading was so satisfactory as to arouse the audience to enthusiasm, and he was recalled repeatedly. As he had evidently not prepared anything else with the orchestra, he responded with three piano-accompanied pieces, including transcriptions of Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song" and Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me."

Glenn Darwin chose for his Watergate appearance George Whitefield Chadwick's admirable setting of Sir Walter Scott's ballad, "Lochinvar," and he sang it with rousing effect. His barytone voice is resonant and carrying, and its tone has a glow. His reception was as cordial as his colleague's, and he too relied upon the piano for his encores: "Il lacerato spirito" from Verdi's "Simon Boccanegra," Malotte's "Song of the Open Road," "Travel Light" and "Without a Song."

The American instrumental works presented by O'Connell were Harl McDonald's colorfully scored "Two Hebraic Poems," Mary Howe's meditative and forceful "Stars"—a commentary on Kant's remark about the starry heavens—Lucien Caillet's clever variations on "Pop Goes the Weasel" and Peter Bodge's medley of service songs, "Salute to Our Armed Forces."

Analyst Urges Education As Postwar Bonus Substitute

By Genevieve Reynolds

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Concerned about the fate of youth in the postwar world? If so start now to persuade Congress to provide educational opportunities for the returning service men and women. This is the advice of amiable, farsighted Mrs. Hazel Comstock — woman engineer from Tulsa, Okla., now employed as an industrial analyst at the War Production Board.

"It is far better to give boys and girls scholarships and to make it possible to complete their education after the war than to hand them a bonus," she asserted. "Many boys and girls have given up their school and college careers to go into the service. They should have a chance to take up where they left off. And the Government should take the responsibility of doing it."

She herself has a son in training at Fort Sill. His career was interrupted by the war, but she quickly explains that thousands of other youths are in the same boat. Many of the boys voluntarily chucked schools to fight.

Learned About Minerals

Versatile and capable Mrs. Comstock gave up a lucrative business back in Oklahoma to aid the war effort. Patriotism overshadowed all other impulses. Then this 41-year-old metallurgical engineer—one of the very few women in the field and probably the first—is a remarkable woman.

Educated for a lady of leisure existence, she majored in English and minored in public speaking. At the age of 24 she found herself with two children to support, Mrs. Comstock entered the business world but she found she couldn't get big accounts without knowing something about minerals. So she went back to school; worked and studied five nights a week at Tulsa University. With perseverance she looked after her children, worked and quickly nabbed a degree in metallurgical engineering.

Prejudices against women engineers?—naturally. That didn't worry independent, hard-working Mrs. Comstock. She simply ignored them by going into business for herself. One year she sold more ornamental bronze than any other State agency in the United States. She trained her salesmen personally, chose young men so they wouldn't resent a woman boss.

Field for Women

In the future she thinks there will be good openings for women in the engineering field—especially technicians. Already they can just about name their own salaries, according to Mrs. Comstock.

Tall, slender, with clear, bright blue eyes and prematurely white hair, Mrs. Comstock is made of pioneer stuff. When necessary she jumps red tape and bucks authority—but she gets things done and quite diplomatically.

MRS. HAZEL COMSTOCK

Victory farming doesn't feeze her one whit. She recalls during World War I, when the wheat crop was about to spoil through lack of workers, she pitched in and drove a six-mule wheat binder. Weighing slightly under 96 pounds, she did a whale of a job to help save the wheat crop.

Debunking the theory women will want to cling to their wartime jobs, Mrs. Comstock put it thusly: "I don't think the boys need worry about coming back to a bunch of militant females, clinging tenaciously to their jobs. Thousands of girls and women who stepped out of the home to do necessary war jobs will be glad to take up their old jobs of housekeeping and rearing families."

However, she went on to point out that many job opportunities will be open to women in the postwar world—especially in the educational field.

Home and Family First

Seeing both the career woman's and homemaker's angle, Mrs. Comstock thinks women should put home and family first. She is convinced girls make better wives if they have worked a couple of years. "In that way a girl learns what she spends has caused somebody time and effort," she said. "Talents, however, should not be wasted, but developed, be it man or woman.

Feminine in appearance and manner, Mrs. Comstock lists horseback riding as her favorite sport. In fact, she can't remember when she first started to ride. Her father turned the reins loose when she was 5 years old and let her manage her own horse. It wasn't long before she became adept at polo.

Back in Oklahoma her favorite hobby was growing flowers—she developed four or five new varieties. What with all her interest in business, sports—she's an excellent cook and loves to do it. She loves people and people take to her.

With a ready wit and an answer to all questions Mrs. Comstock sees no reason why her sex shouldn't be willing and happy to take the less interesting and spectacular postwar jobs if it means returning them to the serviceimen. To her way of thinking, the men who fought should have first choice of jobs.

Save Summer Crops for Use Next Winter

By Martha Ellyn

Maybe your grandmother called it brining . . . or maybe she called it salting . . . maybe she spoke of it as "salt and sour pickling" . . . or maybe she just talked about "putting down" vegetables in crocks in the cellar. Whatever she called it, she meant preserving vegetables with salt . . . the familiar method that makes cabbage into sauerkraut and cucumbers into dill pickles.

Long before the discovery of modern canning, housewives were saving their garden vegetables by brining them. Then canning came to be the preferred way of putting up vegetables. Today brining is returning as a wartime method of preserving because of the shortage of pressure cookers and other canning supplies. Brining is a good way to preserve nonacid vegetables especially, if you have no pressure cooker for canning them. Brining calls for no special equipment or scarce materials. Some 25 vegetables are suitable for preserving this way, the first greens in the spring to the late cabbages and turnips of the fall. Brined vegetables have a slightly salt, slightly sour flavor. If you like your vegetables seasoned with salt and a little vinegar or lemon juice, you should enjoy vegetables preserved in this manner. Most brined vegetables need cooking before serving, but some of them, like brined green tomatoes and dill pickles, which are more sour than the others, you serve cold as a relish.

Recent Study

Scientists of the North Carolina Experiment Station and the United States Department of Agriculture have been studying this process of brining in recent years and have made improvements on our grandmothers' method. The result is that brined vegetables today taste better and have more vitamin value. Green vegetables brined the modern way rank high in vitamin A.

Grandmother put down her vegetables in a great deal of salt . . . so much salt that they kept in open crocks all winter long . . . so much salt that before the vegetables were palatable for use, she had to soak them a whole day. Unfortunately, all that soaking removed vitamins and minerals along with the salt, so that by the time the vegetables reached the dinner table they didn't rate much in food value.

The new method of brining calls for considerably less salt to begin with and little or no soaking before cooking and serving. With the new method you don't leave the vegetables in crocks all winter, but keep them there only long enough for the pickling or fermenting process to take place—about two weeks. Then you pack them in glass jars . . . process the jars in hot water . . . and seal them like canned vegetables. You see, after the vegetables stand in brine a short time they begin to ferment. The same bacteria that sour milk act on the salty liquid around the vegetables, turning the liquid acid, and the acid helps preserve the vegetables and gives them the characteristic pickled taste.

Just two vegetables—corn and lima beans—need heavy salt to keep them. But other vegetables, many of them ready now—snap beans, greens of all kinds, green tomatoes, carrots, beets and cauliflower—you can brine with "light salt" brine, as the chemists call it. Let's consider how to do this light-salt brining, step by step.

Simple Process

First, wash and scald container you are going to use for putting down the vegetables in brine. It may be a large crock, a large glass jar, a wooden tub or keg . . . but it must be thoroughly clean.

Second, make the brine mixture. Use a half pound of salt and a half pint of vinegar to each gallon of water. Make enough to fill half the crock or other container you are going to use. Most hardware stores and general supply stores sell 5 gallon or 10 gallon crocks. Use pure granulated salt, NOT rock salt or salt with any thing added to keep it from caking.

Third, prepare the vegetables just as you would for the table or for canning. Snap beans, for example, you wash, remove ends, then break in pieces or leave whole as you do for cooking or canning. Beans should be young and tender.

Next, scald the prepared beans or other vegetables, for 5 minutes in boiling water, or cook in a steamer 5 minutes, then drain. Cool and pack in the crock up to a couple of inches of the top.

Take a clean piece of cheesecloth and cover it over the vegetables in the crock, tucking the ends down inside the crock. Over the cheesecloth lay a plate large enough to fit just inside the crock. Weigh the plate down with a clean stone about as heavy as a brick. Last of all pour on the brine. Use enough so that it comes up to the plate and completely covers the vegetables.

Keep the crock of vegetables and brine at a temperature between 70 and 75 degrees Fahrenheit. Very shortly fermentation will start. You will notice bubbles forming and rising to the top. Watch for a white scum to form on the surface. When the scum forms, lift off the plate and the stone . . . then lift up the cheesecloth by the sides and corners so the scum comes off with it. Wash the scum off the cheesecloth . . . also wash the plate and stone. Then put the cloth, plate and stone back as they were. If scum develops fast, remove it every second day.

In about 2 weeks fermentation should be over. The bubbling will have stopped. You can cook and use the vegetables right then . . . or put them up in glass jars for next winter. To put up in jars, pack the vegetables in quart or pint jars, then fill the jars to a half inch of the top with brine. Partially seal the tops. Place them in the boiling water bath. Process pint jars 25 minutes, quart jars 30 minutes. Seal jars at once. Store like any canned vegetable.

When you get ready to use the brined vegetables, rinse once or twice, then cook in fresh water about 10 minutes.

Mrs. Elsie Dawson is shown in top picture, making snapbeans ready for steaming. After the beans are steamed for 5 minutes, they are then cooled and cut into pieces of uniform length. In center picture, Mrs. Dawson is giving freshly picked, tender, young beans a thorough washing. In lower picture, she is distributing pure granulated salt evenly throughout the beans by sprinkling it over each layer of beans. After the last layer of salt has been added to the last layer of beans, then vinegar will be poured over the top.

Conservation, The Civilian's Battle Cry

Since the beginning of the war the civilian's battle cry has been conservation — the stretching of the things already owned—making them last as long as possible, and then converting them to other uses when they had outlived their original purposes.

Following the trend of the times, The Post's Women's page have carried dozens of stories on the conservation of household articles, clothes and food, and, since last February have presented a series of stories dedicated specifically to the theme of "Make It Do," recently adopted as a slogan by WPB. To name but a few, there have been articles telling how to make children's playsuits and aprons from worn-out sheets, how to stretch that precious pound of butter, how to make the most of meat rations, how to rejuvenate old furniture.

In the fashion field, The Post has presented "finds" in clothes—the best for your money, has hailed the results of WPB restrictions—because by their enforced simplicity they were freed from the peacetime yoke of fashion-for-fashion's sake. The classic dresses, suits and coats, which will be good season after season were pointed out as good wartime buys.

These "Make It Do" articles will be continued, and beginning today, each Saturday will see an even larger offering of conservation ideas—in clothes, beauty, household and food—as well as a shopping column which will save your time by hunting down the little items that make the difference between saving and wasting.

"Make It Do" ideas from readers will be welcomed. Send in your favorite conservation idea that others may benefit from it. Address your letter to the Women's Editor, The Washington Post.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

Washington Summer Girl

She wears no girdle, and her stomach protrudes, and her hips shimmy as she walks along the street. Her dress hikes up in the back and an expanse of bare leg shows above her rolled stocking. She is hatless, her stringy hair blowing unbecomingly in the wind . . . No, this isn't a feminine ghost of the terrible 20's but a Washington summer girl of 1943—as seen by a visiting critic.

In a letter to this column, a New Yorker deplores the general impression Washington girls and women give to visitors. She objects particularly to the "bouncing derrieres" seen on the streets and asks, "Why the apparent aversion in Washington to wearing girdles?" She feels that too many women never bother to look in a long mirror before they leave home, or if they do, momentarily straighten up, draw in stomachs and hips, and then on reaching the street straightway relax and proceed with stomachs protruding and rears sticking out and bouncing along. She writes:

"Contrasted with truly fashionable Washington—I must say there are many chic women and girls here—the average girl one sees on the street, who gives visitors their impression of the city, is a pretty sorry sight."

Are Women Here Sloppy in Dress?

Is this criticism merited? Before shouting angrily anything about New Yorkers' snootiness, we would do well to try to answer this question honestly. This is something more than the old New York-Washington feud over fashion standards. This is not the perennial debate over the little black sheer versus the Southern belle organdie. It might rather be called an issue of esthetics versus comfort, or convention versus instinct, or possibly of art versus nature.

Also we should remember that New Yorkers are not alone in their criticism of the informal dress of Washington women. The rolled socks, the bare legs, the too short skirts, the "kiddish" styles worn by adults—all these have drawn much adverse comment from many sources in the last year or so, and furnished a problem for executives and personnel directors.

However there is one big point the dress critics overlook. That is climate. Almost any woman, regardless of what kind of figure she possesses, would have been justified in shedding her girdle during the recent 17-day siege of heat and humidity. Also in a greatly overcrowded city, where life on street car, bus, in office, store, restaurant, is a fight for survival, women naturally are tempted to put on as comfortable armor as possible for the daily fray.

Another point for the defense is that being well groomed and well dressed—with hair freshly washed and coiffed, hats that are chic, dresses that are smart and in good taste, and that among other things are so well cut as to conceal "bouncing derrieres," require time and money, something the average girl in this city of crowded moments and high living expenses has very little of.

Bad Taste, Laziness Not Valid Excuses

In spite of all this, it still must be admitted that the critics have a point, or rather several of them. They might well ask: What excuses other than bad taste and carelessness is there for the dresses that are too short and that hike up behind? Also what about the sloppy—and unhealthful— posture that contributes to protruding stomachs and rears? What about the lack of exercise that encourages them? What about the indifferent grooming? What about sartorial smugness and lack of effort to improve taste? What about the hoarding, the thoughtless shopping and panic buying which result in a confused and dowdy appearance?

Yes, it is true that the question of feminine dress may seem a trivial one to be raised at a time when the world is enacting an epic tragedy. Yet it is something that has a close relation to character. One of the most important disciplines of fighting men is in neatness and personal grooming—also in a posture in which rear and stomach do not protrude. And what bettter examples do we have of neatly turned out women than the WAVES, WAACS and other girls in uniform? Is it not reasonable enough to expect as much of civilians?

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

There is just one kind of exercise that comes natural. That's stretching—and your best bet for the hot weather. You can stay in bed 5 minutes longer in the morning with a perfectly free conscience if you take this time to stretch, for it will do quite a lot for your figure and may even keep you in such good condition that you don't bog down in the heat.

Clear the decks and give yourself room. Toss the pillows on the floor and throw the covers over the foot of the bed. Then, go about your stretching very lazily. Don't make work of it. It should be a pleasure.

Lie on your back and reach both arms up on the mattress overhead and push down with your heels. Shove one shoulder up higher on the bed, and push down a little farther with that leg. Then shove and push with the other side. See how slim you can make yourself through the middle. Relax and yawn.

If your waistline seems to be expanding with the heat, here's a stretcher that will fix it. Stay in the same relaxed position just described, keep the knees together, and slowly twist at the waist and lower legs until one thigh rests on bed. Hold it, return to position and twist to other side. While you are twisting at the waist, hold your shoulder on the bed. That gets more stretch out of the waist muscles. When you finish twisting, relax, as you were.

Flip over, face downward, head resting on arms and legs straight down. First make yourself a limp, dead weight. Then tense the muscles in one hip and very slowly raise that leg up and back, knee straight. Hold, lower. Relax the muscles and repeat with other leg. Try not to roll over to the other side as the leg is raised. To get at the hump on the outer side of the hip, stay in that same position and keep one leg straight down as, without raising other leg from bed, you move it far out to side. Repeat several times, then with other leg. Do this slowly. You should feel a definite contraction of the muscles underlying the fat on the side of the hip.

Now for a waker-upper. Over on your back again, wriggle downward until your toes are anchored under the covers, and stretch arms up on bed overhead. Come up to sitting position, stretch through middle, and reach over and touch toes. Hold it, then lower backward. Try it again. This time, instead of lowering yourself backward, just fall back on the bed.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The hour at which a mother chooses to do her shopping has a lot to do with the way her baby behaves. To shop when the child is at his crossest, just before a mealtime or a nap, is guaranteed to make the expedition miserable for all concerned.

If one must subject a child to the tiresome duty of following the mother around any shop, then by all means select an hour when his good humor runs high. Runabouts can be kept busy enough so they won't be darting hither and yon, thus leading to constant admonitions to be good boys and girls and ending up with the inevitable punishment. How can any child, unless his own interest is harnessed, be anything but a nuisance when he is let loose in a store full of alluding articles and objects all at hand level?

Give the child a personal interest in the shopping. Let him carry the bundles or push the grocery cart or hold the change or take the packages to the car or pile them in the market basket. Anything, so that he waits patiently for the time when it will be his turn to do his job.

If his mother is selecting articles from a shelf, let her point them out to the child and allow him to do the picking up. This is a good time to remind the child we take only the things we buy and pay for. Nothing more.

To sing some such nonsense jingle as, "To Market, to Market," etc., on the way to the shop, relates the child's own activities to these fictional ones and makes them the more interesting.

Mrs. R. M. says her 5½-month-old baby cries every time she goes into a store. She finds it very embarrassing to come out to find three or four women trying to quiet him and telling him he shouldn't cry. I hate to pick him up and spoil him.

"He doesn't sleep much in daytime, just about 1½ hours in the morning and one-half to one hour in the afternoon. He sleeps from 6 to 5:30 though and doesn't cry unless hungry."

Then do be reasonable about the shopping. He feels forlorn and alone outdoors in this strange setting. Either take him in the afternoon during his nap time—he'd sleep outdoors just as long or longer—or take him in the store with you so at least he has your familiar presence to buoy him up in the strange environment.

You could, with management, have your order written out and let it be filled, perhaps, while you stay outside with the baby.

Our leaflet, "Airing the Baby," gives instructions also for safe sunbathing. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Treat Them Kindly

By Ruth Gregory

IF ALL the garments ruined by American women in the past decade could be piled high, you'd have a heap that would rival the Empire State Building. Because we've had so much, we've been a careless people.

But the blouse you scorched last week through carlessness is no longer a private and a minor tragedy. This year waste through carelessness is a national concern. Every garment you can stretch the life of means there'll be more fabric to go around, more cloth released for Uncle Sam's armed forces, more money to put into war bonds and savings.

READY-TO-WEAR: Keep your clothes in order. Brush them, air them, hang them properly. Change frequently (imperative in summer) so that no one garment carries the burden of continuous wear. Put shields in dresses if you need them. If you use an antiperspirant, be sure to follow instructions (some are harsh on fabrics).

GIVE FIRST AID to tears, split seams, sagging hem lines. A stitch in time saves nine is a very bright saying for all its age. Get you to the notions counter if your mending kit (you better have one) is short of tape, thread, buttons.

WASH GARMENTS CAREFULLY: Most clothes carry tags that tell you how to care for them, whether they're washable or not. If there's no tag, examine the color and the weave. Smooth weaves, in general, are washable, while novelty weaves—crepes, matelasse—are not. A good test re color fastness is to clip a small piece from a seam and put it into a glass of warm water. If it runs—don't wash it.

Many clothes nowadays are either pure rayon or mixed. Cellulose fibers—the source of rayon—are broken down by strong soaps, harsh rubbing and heat. That's why it's necessary to wash such fabrics in lukewarm water, in mild soap flakes, rub them gently and dry away from direct heat.

CLEANING: It's hard to get clothes cleaned professionally these days (sometimes takes a month to get a garment back). That's why we scouted around for a fluid that you can use safely at home for most every kind of fabric. You can get a gallon can of this for around 60 cents; 2 gallons for about a dollar.

IRONING: If you have one of those wonderful irons (the like of which they're not making for the duration, or any other kind), with a gadget that controls heat for different kinds of fabric, you're lucky. If not, you have to watch that iron like a hawk, particularly for rayon fabrics—the iron must always be moderate. Rayon acetates should be pressed damp—and always on the wrong side. Rayon and wool mixtures should be pressed with a damp cloth; crinkly cloths should be shaped while damp and pressed over a towel when dry.

OUT OF MY MIND

While I Think Of It

By Katharine Brush

Why do those whizzing busboys in restaurants always fill every water glass except mine? . . . I love the Cockney accent, and it's all over New York these days . . . Nothing injures my dignity like those business-return envelopes which say, in a little frame in the upper right-hand corner, "Place Stamp Here." Do they think I've lived all these years in this world without learning where the stamp goes? . . . That soldier's letter, addressed simply to "Red-Headed Sylvia, c/o Stage Door Canteen," which hung on the bulletin board in the canteen-hostesses' coatroom for months and months, has finally disappeared. Does this mean that it was claimed at last—and who was Sylvia? I'm dying to know.

The WAACS do not all look alike in the face to me, but the WAVES do, for some strange reason—and you can't tell me there isn't a distinct WAVE type, blue-eyed, pink-cheeked, with medium-brown hair . . . A man I know who played professional football in civilian life is now running a sewing machine in the Quartermaster Corps—and that reminds me, what's the correct noun for a man who sews? Would he be a seamster? . . . I hear that the officers stationed at Atlantic City never set foot on the Boardwalk if they can possibly avoid it, because the salutes come so thick and fast that it wears them out, and wears the men out . . . Have you been fingerprinted yet, and wasn't it kind of fun, in a messy sort of way?

I think women's summer stockings should look just like their skin—but when they go bare-legged, I think their skin should look like stockings . . . Do you suppose our grandmothers would have referred to leg make-up as "limb plant"? Or would they have been too scandalized to refer to it at all? . . . Nothing about the average magazine fascinates me more than the advertisements (and especially the patriotic ones they're using nowadays), but still I wish the ads wouldn't crowd the page numbers off the pages quite as often as they do, leaving me not knowing where I'm at . . . I adore that plaintive little song the boys in the Air Force ground schools sing when they march, about how "The Air Cadets will win the war, so what the heck are WE marching for?"

I have a friend whose way of goading herself into taking off 5 pounds is to buy a dress she simply loves, in the next size smaller than her present size, at a price she can't afford and at a sale which allows no returns or exchanges . . . And I also know a young woman—a pale, ethereal creature, in this case—who tried to give a pint of her blood to the blood bank the other day; and when they had taken the usual test they shook their heads sorrowfully at her, and she swears that what they said was, "We'll give YOU some."

The letters from servicemen in Hawaii are full of those words the tourists used to learn and dote on—"wahine" for woman, for instance, and "malihini" for stranger, and "okolehao" (which is a native Hawaiian drink, something like distilled dynamite); and "pau," which means finished, done-for, goodby-now, that'll-be-all-brother . . . A malihini is apt to get pau from okolehao, if you see what I mean . . . When you visit an Army post, they teach you how to dispose of your cigarette stub without throwing it on the ground, in your careless civilian way—it seems the trick is to tamp out the cigarette on the sole of your shoe, then split it with your fingernail, releasing the tobacco to the breeze. This leaves you with the empty cigarette paper, and that's no problem—you just roll it up into a tiny spitball and flick it at somebody.

I don't see how we lived without the word "expendable," or the phrase "On the beam" . . . Don't you keep wishing the late Billy Mitchell were alive today, to see how right he was? . . . I want the following famous articles preserved for a museum: (1) Mme. Chiang Kai-shek's diamond air-force wings, (2) Mr. Roosevelt cigarette holder, (3) Winston Churchill's cream silk pajamas, (4) Gandhi's walking stick, (5) Goering's hairnet, (6) a snip of Hitler's mustache, (7) a lock of John L. Lewis' eyebrows, (8) Clark Gable's shoulder bars, (9) Montgomery's hat, (10) that copy of the Bible they had on the Rickenbacker raft.

In an era of many slogans and watchwords which thrill the spirit and touch the hearts, I know of none more moving than the slogan of the British women's army (called the WAACS in the last war, but since renamed the A. T. S.). Bear in mind that they are women, when I tell you what the slogan is. It appears on their recruiting posters, and it's eight words long. It's this:

"IF YOU LOVE YOUR HOME, LEAVE IT NOW."

Archeologist From Colombia to Work In This Country

The double mission with which Senor Gregorio Hernandez de Alba of Colombia has been entrusted during his stay in this country is a new proof of how well the Good Neighbor policy is working. A guest of the State Department, Senor Hernandez de Alba is one of Colombia's most distinguished archeologists and the chief of his country's National Archeological Service whose aim is to study and preserve the monuments and historic sites of Colombia and to coordinate all subjects related with anthropology.

During his eight-month visit to the United States, Senor Hernandez de Alba will write several chapters for the Handbook of South American Indians, published by the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution. These chapters will cover among other things the indigenous culture of the Colombian Andes. For the Institute of Andean Research of Yale University, the distinguished Colombian will prepare —during his stay here—a report on the anthropological research effected in Colombia in 1941-42 under Dr. Wendell C. Bennett.

Yanks Devise Location Code For Homefolks

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, July 23.—Army doctors may have a different idea but Army censors claim the most common ailment among American troops overseas is "code in the head."

As soon as he gets abroad the average doughboy is beset with an overwhelming desire to tell the folks back home exactly where he is stationed. That is strictly against Army regulations because it might disclose the location of an entire Army unit.

So a soldier sets about to outfigure the censors with home-made codes designed to impart that information.

There have been some fairly ingenious ones according to the men who scan the letters. One lad tried to spell out "Tunis" by writing five consecutive letters to his mother and giving her five different middle initials.

The trouble was the five letters arrived out of sequence. The five initials spelled "nutsi!" and somewhat bewildered parents wrote that, "We cannot find that place anywhere in North Africa."

A variation of this method was tried by another soldier who openly notified his parents in his first letter that the first letter of the first word of each subsequent letter would spell the name and place where he was. The censors punished him by eliminating the opening sentence of every letter, then told him not to do it any more.

Hundreds of soldiers tried referring to the titles of recent movies such as "Casablanca" and "Road to Morocco" as means of getting information across. One who was slightly more subtle referred to the theme song of Casablanca telling his parents that for months he had been whistling "As Time Goes By."

His folks did tumble. His mother replied "That's a long time to sing the same song. Should I send you some new phonograph records?'

Now the doughboys are in Sicily, the censors expect to find letters freighted with cryptic references to fiery sweethearts named "Etna."

And they are willing to bet the first letters from the Italian capital will tell some folks home, "I have been roaming around quite a bit, etc."

Court Decision Seen Affecting All Retailers

The action of the Court of Appeals in the case of the Hecht Co. has implications "extending to every retailer in the land," Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager, declared yesterday.

In a two-to-one ruling on Thursday, the appellate court reversed a decision by Justice F. Dickinson Letts of District Court to deny an OPA injunction against the department store for alleged violation of price ceilings.

"The Hecht Co. . . . has made a determined effort to comply with the regulations, and I venture to say that our compliance has been as close to the goal as that of any retailer in the United States," Dulcan said. "If this is what the law means, then . . . the same injunction can be obtained against every retailer," he added.

On the basis of this latest ruling, the Hecht Co. may be subject to contempt of court and restrictive penalties should "wilful" violations be proven against it in the future.

Although "disappointed" in the outcome of the case, Dulcan said he was "gratified" to note the dissenting statement of Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, agreed in by the majority opinion, that, "It is clear the company made serious and costly efforts to comply with the law."

". . . From the moral and ethical point of view, I can only repeat that our intentions have always been, and always will be, to uphold the letter and the spirit of governmental action and to play fair with our customers, our competitors, our community and our country," Dulcan concluded.

Counsel Job Goes Begging; No Applicants

By Roger Young
Post Staff Writer

One reason for the President's inaction in filling the position of Peoples Counsel for the District Public Utilities Commission is that no recommendations or applications for the appointment have been received since Congress restored the appropriation for the job, White House sources stated last night.

Although this was interpreted by the White House as a sign of public indifference to the filling of the position which the President has left vacant for seven years, District observers had a different theory.

It was pointed out that it would be futile to make such recommendation or application until there was some indication that the President would comply with the will of Congress—as expressed in the restoration of funds for the purpose—that the position be filled.

Mr. Roosevelt's steadfast refusal to nominate a peoples' counsel, in spite of the Public Utilities Act of 1926 which says that he shall do so, is reportedly based on his veto of a bill to create such a counsel for the State of New York in 1930. At that time Mr. Roosevelt said in part:

"The entire purpose of this bill is based upon a fundamentally false conception of the proper function of a public service commission. Public service commissions were originally adopted in this and other States for the purpose of carrying out certain duties in connection with utilities cases theretofore performed by the various legislatures.

"These duties, in essence, are to see that public utilities companies furnish to the consuming public adequate service at fair and reasonable rates and to protect legitimate investors in utility securities. The Public Service Commission has taken three legislative functions over.

"It is not and has never been merely a court. It is rather intended to represent the public interest in connection with various industries of a semipublic nature subjected to its jurisdiction.

"The very nature of the business under their control renders inoperative the ordinary controlling force of competition, therefore the State has provided this machinery to protect the public from the evils which would inevitably follow from the granting of monopolistic privileges."

'China' Brings Vivid Story Of Love and War to Earle

WELL PRODUCED, acted and directed, "China," Paramount's new feature on the screen at the Earle Theater, is at once a vibrant love story, a stirring tribute to the valor of the Chinese and a telling deflation of Japanese arrogance.

Occasionally the pleas for all-out spiritual and material aid to embattled China seem a shade too obvious and heavy-handed for best dramatic effect, but in the large view the picture is primarily a thrilling melodrama retarded only a little by its appeals to sympathetic understanding of an heroic people who have suffered long and fought bravely.

The scene is an invaded and bombed area of China from which Loretta Young, in the role of Carolyn Grant, a Chinese-born American teacher, is endeavoring to evacuate a large number of her pupils, whose future task is to be the creation of a "new China." The quickest means of escape seems to be aboard the truck of a Mr. Jones, a hard-bitten American oil salesman, to whom, during the period of this country's neutrality, all customers look alike. Willing to pay high prices for his product, the Nips are especially good customers—until Mr. Jones personally encounters a few of their nastier habits in warfare, such as shooting down defenseless old people and children, rape, arson and wanton murder. That puts a slightly different complexion on the whole thing, and on Mr. Jones, too, in the eyes of Miss Grant.

Mr. Jones' conversion to the cause of the oppressed, in fact, is so complete that the end of the picture finds him a hero, who has been willing to sacrifice life and love in his new-born enthusiasm for wiping out the Japs.

The story is told on the screen in effective contrasts of violent action and gentler passages that are tender, pathetic and amusing by turns. The air attacks, bombing raids, destruction of a bridge vital to the Japanese and the final blasting away of half a mountain to engulf the invading hordes in an avalanche that also erases Mr. Jones from everything but a glorious memory, are skillfully executed intervals of vivid action that have not been marred by fantastic overemphasis. The scenes between the case-hardened Jones and the iron-willed Miss Grant graduate from the most brittle asperities to the warm and limpid moments of a great love. It is the enormous revulsion of free people against the brutalities of armed aggression that strikes the final and dominant note of the film. All in all, the thing is kept in splendid balance.

Three Stars Uniformly Excellent

In the pivotal roles of three Americans of violently opposed viewpoints, Alan Ladd, Loretta Young and William Bendix combine diverse talents that compile an unusual richness of interest. It is as distinct a novelty to discover in Alan Ladd the gentle qualities of an ardent lover as it was in the case of Humphrey Bogart in "Casablanca." The departure from his accustomed cold-steel exterior is not sufficiently marked to alienate the regard of any of his "fans" who have based their admiration on his suavity as a "killer." Quite the contrary. Loretta Young, as usual, plays with authority and charm and, as the developments require, flashes of deep feeling.

No less surprising than Ladd's, is William Bendix's performance in the role of Johnny Sparrow, his rough-and-ready associate, who demonstrates an unsuspected capacity for gentleness and deep human compassion, in striking contrast to the belligerent portrayal that made him famous in "Wake Island." He also is responsible for a large measure of the picture's rich vein of comedy, which so agreeably threads most of the action.

An almost exclusively Chinese supporting cast of unique competence gives "China" an authentic touch as impressive as the truth of all it has to say.

In addition to the Roxyettes and Jo Lombardi's Orchestra, also on stage, the Earle's new revue enlists the services of only two outside acts, both diverting, even if not precisely devastating. Holst and Milady offer a clever combination of the dance and some championship feats on the horizontal bar, and Pat Henning contributes a presumably amusing interval of monologue and impersonations, not more than half of which was intelligible from our perch in the loge. Audibility must have been better in other parts of the house, because Mr. Henning bowed off at least six times to great salvos of applause. The Roxyettes "Soldier" and "Shawl" routines are executed with characteristic skill.

The supplementaries are rather more numerous than usual this week. A Grantland Rice Sportlight, "Hike or Bike," devoted to leg-work for locomotion; "Yankee Doodle Daffy," one of the best of the Looney Tune cartoons, and the newsreel are about as always. Overshadowing them, is the "Three Cheers for the Girls" symposium of spectacular scenes from a long list of Warner Brothers musicals, which is something to see—if you can do with a little memory jogging. I can't for the life of me recall anything on the bill to prevent anybody's recommending it.

HEDDA HOPPER

A Problem in Casting

Hollywood, Calif., July 23.—Winfield Sheehan is wrestling with a casting problem in the story of Eddie Rickenbacker that's truly colossal. "Rickenbacker" deals not only with the living but the dead. The following will be impersonated on the screen—Secretary Stimson, the late Billy Mitchell, General Marshall, Admiral Nimitz, Chiang Kai-shek and Mme. Chiang, Josef Stalin, General Eisenhower, Churchill, General Stilwell, Henry Ford, General Pershing, General Arnold, Hermann Goering, Ernst Udet, General Milch, General de Gaulle, Stanley Baldwin, Lady Astor, Hitler, Gandhi, General MacArthur, Admiral Halsey, General Wavell, Bernard Baruch, many other statesmen—and of course Rickenbacker's companions on the 21-day ordeal on the raft. Rickenbacker had a memorable meeting with Hitler in 1935, when Hitler showed him his plans for war. Few believe Rickenbacker's story. It's going to drag out an awful lot of history, and if the film's in color, many crimson faces will predominate that screen.

Broadway's Loss

Broadway's lost out again. Dorothy McGuire declared on the first day she began work in "Claudia" that she'd divide her time between movies and Broadway. She meant it. That was before she'd met John Swope. Now she'll divide her time between her duties as a wife at Phoenix, Ariz., and Hollywood. Dorothy and John met four months ago at Leland Hayward's house, were engaged only two weeks. They had a quiet wedding at the Haywards' one Sunday . . . Might have known Capt. Jimmy Stewart, on leave here, was up to something momentous. He was. He was Swope's best man. 'Twas reported that Jimmy had been beauing Dinah Shore about, which was a mistake. Her leading man is Pvt. George Montgomery.

Friend in Need

Lots of excitement at a beauty shop here when Louise Fazenda met a pretty little 16-year-old high school girl, Elaine Nelson, from Eagle Rock. Louise asked if she could sing. Yes, she was taking lessons—also dancing. Said Louise, "How about a screen test?" The girl looked mighty skeptical but reckoned she's like one, and Louise said, "Come to Warner Brothers Monday and I'll see you get a good one. If it turns out well, I'll personally supervise your career." As Louise left the booth she turned to Operator Helen Doren, and said, "Tell her I'm not an ogre—I'm all right." Then the youngster for the first time found out that Louise was the wife of Hal Wallis, the biggest producer on the Warner lot.

Short Shorts

Joe Kennedy angels Freddie Lonsdale's play, "Love Story," which stars Roland Young. Roland's house is up for sale—all his belongings, including a priceless collection of penguins . . . Betty Hutton wired from Fayetteville, N. C.: "I'm through with Hollywood men. I've fallen in love with everybody from a yardbird to a general here" . . . Victor Moore became a chain smoker at the license bureau while his child bride, "Sweetie-Pie," took her driving test

Broadway Bulletins

New York, July 23.

Joe Louis, the heavyweight champ, had to appear at Camp Upton on an Army matter. He arrived there promptly, and learned that he had to sign some official documents. Louis seated himself at the table and affixed his signature to a sheaf of papers placed before him. He signed 17 documents . . . "These papers are all alike," the puzzled champ told the sergeant . . . "That's right. They are all alike," replied the sergeant . . . "Then why do I have to sign 'em all?" asked Louis . . . "Original and duplicate are for the Army files," explained the sergeant, distributing the papers among the soldiers there. "The rest—autographs."

WILLIAM SAROYAN

Unless McGraw-Hill, the publishing house, or Edward J. Nobel, the former Undersecretary of Commerce, who now owns Station WMCA, don't bid higher, the Blue network will be sold this week for $7,500,000 cash. The asking price originally was $12,000,000 . . . A member of the law committee of the Brooklyn Democratic Committee will be appointed as counsel to the city council in its investigation of City Hall . . . Paul Burger, who was a principal witness against Lepke, will receive a suspended sentence. That's what the prosecutor will recommend . . . If Biddle persists in refusing to turn over Lepke for execution, an appeal will be made directly to the President.

One of the many unproduced plays left by William Saroyan when he entered the Army is "Get Away Old Man"—a play about Louis B. Mayer, to whom Saroyan had sold "The Human Comedy." Three Broadway producers now are interested in this play. They ask only that the author do a minor rewriting job, but Saroyan refuses to put pencil to it—because he's in the Army, and is giving his full measure to the service . . . "But the rewriting will take less than an hour," was the message one producer sent him. "You can do it in your spare time" . . . But Saroyan refused. "When a man becomes a soldier," was his message, "there's no spare time for private business."

Twelve Government accountants are coming to New York to assist the three now working on the project for a survey on rent control here. Their decision, as to the necessity for putting a ceiling on New York rents, will be ready in ten days . . . The Polish government in exile discovered the existence of a bust of the late Premier Sikorski. It was made by Lieut. Nison Tregor. They purchased two copies of it—one for Sikorski's widow and the other for exhibition at the British Military Museum . . . Mayor LaGuardia made a short-wave broadcast to Belgium, for Belgian independence day . . . Moss Hart's Air Force show will have its premiere on Thanksgiving Day.

Bernard Baruch was playing gin-rummy with some friends at his Long Island home. He played cautiously and intensely, deliberating carefully before making any discard. The stakes were average—a penny a point—but the famed industrialist played as if a Wall Street merger depended upon the outcome . . . "Why so serious?" one of the guests asked him . . . "In any game of cards," replied Baruch, "you must play against your friends as if they were your enemies."

Irving Caesar has a new first act finale for his musical, "My Dear Public." It's called "There Ain't No Colored Line in Heaven." The show will open in Detroit in three weeks . . . Newbold Morris, president of the city council, has completed all the arrangements for the conversion of the former Mecca Temple into a New York City Art Center . . . Judith Evelyn, who has the leading role in "Angel Street," has been signed for a C. B. S. series starting August 2 . . . The Gallico musical, "Miss Underground," which was abandoned, may be revived. The Larry Hart-Emmerich Kalman songs were played yesterday for a group of Wall Street brokers who might back the production.

Officer Roles Cast

World War I officer roles for M-G-M's "White Cliffs of Dover," starring Irene Dunne with Alan Marshal, will be played by Gavin Muir, as Griffith; Anthony Gouldporter in the role of Portage; Vernon Downing as Herrick, and Harold Dubeca the Dr. Davis of the film. Clarence Brown directs the adaptation of Alice Duer Miller's poem with Sidney Franklin producing.
